SARAH JO BURCH
 Little Sarah Jo Burch

Has Reached Her Eternal Home

By Lucy Laughter
 ANDREWS - Little Sarah
 Jo Burch died Wednesday, Jan.
 25, at the age of five years.
 Every time my telephone rings
 I still expect her low sweet voice to say, "Is you Lucy, I's Sara Jo". So many, many times I've picked up the telephone to hear those words.
 The one comfort I have,
 and the bright light that must

NORTH CAROLINA MEANS BETTER LIVING While tobacco and cotton continue to head the list of our principal crops, few North Carolinians are aware that we are leading producers of a greater variety of commercial crops than is grown in perhaps any other state. For example, we are second only to Georgia in production of peanuts, and raise more sweet potatoes than all other states except Louisiana. We are the leading corn producing state outside of the Midwestern Corn Belt, and only nine states produce more soybeans than North Carolina.
 In rural as in urban areas, North Carolinians are equally progressive in their attitudes toward the system of "legal control" of the sale of beer and ale, as being in the best interests of temperance and moderation.
