CAPITAL CLIPBOARD
News and Comment from our Raleigh Bureau - 265 Oberlin Rd.

by Eula H. Greenwood

Although hearings on tax bills have been in progress only a little over a week - and still have about three weeks to go -- certain shapes are already developing.

SANFORD SACRIFICE
One of these is that the people will not have an opportunity to un-do or re-do action taken by the General Assembly. You will recall that Gov. Terry Sanford, in his important revenue message on March 6 recommending the broad-base tax on food to support our broad-base educational program, recommended that his program be carried to the voters for permanence after it had been adopted by the Legislature.

As of last week, even the more avid Sanford apostles wanted none of this doctrine. Consensus among the members is that their power comes fresh from the people -- and they do not want to run the risk of getting a slap in the face. Which could mean later a slap at the polls.

So, in order to keep his big ship afloat, it looks as if this is a bit of ballast the captain must sacrifice. This will not be all he must forego, but is an important item.

GETTING THE VOTES
The feeling here this past weekend was that the Governor has as of right now enough votes in the 85-member Joint Finance Committee to take it to the floor with solid majority support.

There are approximately a dozen various tax packages now before the Joint Finance Committee. Each of them has a following, of course, but the Sanford Plan -- as of last weekend -- seemed to have majority strength. That is, it seemed to have as many followers, and a little better, as all the others combined.

Moreover, the subcommittee (to make recommendations

SENATOR SAM ERVIN

WASHINGTON - Laos and the Congo occupy the stage in the foreign policy global contest being waged by the Soviets. Congressional leaders at home and our allies abroad have express approval of the President's firm stand in the latest Laotian crisis. To date we have fared better than the Soviets in the Congo. In the small nation of Laos our position is less secure despite the fact that since 1954 we have poured some $300 millions into military and economic aid for this country to prevent it from slipping behind the Iron Curtain. There are several reasons for this. First, there is a complacency about the peril by the Laotian leadership which the U. S. is backing. Secondly, the supply lines of the Soviets and their allies are shorter. A Soviet airlift from Hanoi, North Vietnam, a few hundred miles away can drop thousands of rebels into Laos quickly. Lastly, by being the "behind the scenes" aggressor, the Soviets can pick the time and the place for these "brush fire" wars.

WAR AND PEACE - This nation is ardently striving for peace, but at the same time is confronted with the alternative of war. The Soviet leaders seem to understand far better when we state to them that we will not yield another inch of territory than they do when we sit down with them to discuss disarmament. Since this condition exists and we must live with it or perish by it, our imperative need is for a mobile, well-equipped "brush fire" army which is ready to fight at a moment's notice in the most remote province of the world.

CONDITIONS FOR PEACE - While we seek peace and make plans for world disarmament, we must realize that the conditions for peace and disarmament must exist among the world powers. One of the great tragedies of World War II has been the fact that two of our great allies, the Soviet Union and China, have turned into aggressor nations. If they had continued to join with us in the ideals of peace as they did in the strategies of war, the world would have moved toward the "broad and sunlit" areas of lasting peace.

Sixteen years after the armistice of World War II it is not enough for the representatives of the United States to be willing to disarm, to reduce our armies, and to stop all armament research and testing. The disarmament envoys of the Soviet Union and Red China and all nations must be men whose minds and hearts are dedicated to peace. Peace is cultivated in the hearts of men who can intelligently see the advantage of an unguarded American-Canadian border stretching from sea to sea safeguarded by the good will of the two nations. War's harsh alternatives are presented in the Congo and Laotian crises which threaten the peace of the world.
