ASC NEWS

By L. L. Kisselburg

The 1961 feed grain program offers corn or sorghum growers a real opportunity to start a good field of alfalfa or other legume forage crop, says Claud Patterson, chairman of Cherokee County committee.

He points out that well-limed and fertile corn fields are usually an ideal field for alfalfa. "But this is an especially good year because the farmer can be paid for diverting corn and sorghum acreage to soil conserving crops," he explains.

The cooperating farmer who diverts 20 per cent of his corn and grain sorghum acreage to soil improving crops will receive a payment equal to 50 percent of the normal yield of this acreage. The payment will be in the form of a negotiable certificate redeemable in grain or cash equivalent of grain. And he can get up to one-half of this payment at the time he signs up. This can go a long way toward getting the land prepared for the new legume seeding, Mr. Patterson points out.

If weeds are a problem, Patterson recommends using modern weed control methods, including chemicals and summer fallow. After weeds have been brought under control, the farmer will have the field in ideal condition to establish a prize-winning legume crop.

Late summer seeding of alfalfa and grass mixtures have been successful in many parts of Cherokee county. Recommendations for seeding, liming, fertilizer treatments, seeding mixture best adapted to local and specific soil conditions are available at the county agricultural extension agent's office.
