YOU AND YOUR INSURANCE (a public service column about property and casualty insurance)
MALE DRIVERS UNDER 25 HAVE NATION'S WORST ACCIDENT RECORD
 By C.E. Hyde
 A young man in a hurry is often behind the wheel of his father's car.
 A recently conducted study of accident experience across the country has revealed that men under 25 years of age have the nation's worst driving record. Male drivers in this age group are involved in two to three times as many accidents as all other motorists according to the Insurance Information Institute.

The result—higher automobile insurance rates for men in this age category. However, the insurance industry is working with safety authorities, educators, parents and the young driver in an effort to encourage safe driving habits. They even offer rate reductions for young men who successfully complete behind the wheel driver education courses.
 What about young women? They are safer drivers than young men. A large life insurance company made a statistical study and found that young men were involved in more than three times the number of fatal accidents as young women. The male average was 25.4 per 100,000 while for the distaff side it was 8.1 per 100,000.

The report concluded that "the relatively high motor vehicle accident death rate among males in the late teens and early 20's may reflect, in large measure, frequent disregard for safe driving practices."
 For insurance purposes men under 25 are divided into two groups: (1) unmarried men driving their own cars and unmarried men driving family cars. (2) or married men operating their own autos.

 Young men in the first classification are listed as the most hazardous risks. Liability claims from this group average more than triple those filed by all other groups.
 Those youthful drivers who fall into the second risk category incur almost twice as many liability claims as others. Insurance rates for these drivers are lower than for the young unmarried men who drive their own car or are the principal operator of a family car. However, based on over-all experience, their rates are still substantially higher than those offered to mature drivers.

The argument may be advanced that youthful drivers couldn't possibly be involved in two or three times the number of accidents as other drivers. And, of course, this would be true if that were as far as it went. However, this contention fails to relate the number of licensed operators by age groups. On a comparative basis, the young men with a car does not measure up.
 The problem of the careless young male driver is far more serious than increased insurance rates which only reflect the gravity of the situation.
 Insurance companies realize that the recognition of adequate driver training courses through automobile insurance rate discounts of at least 10 per cent will produce a notable psychological effect and go a long way toward stimulating the extension of this program in our community.
 The future of our community and country lies in the strength of our young men. We are committed to making certain that these young people will be available to do their job. Their safety is our business.

Things To Do Before Going On Your Vacation
 A vacation is for fun and relaxation. But it may turn into a miserable flop if, in exciting anticipation of it, you don't do some careful planning.
 When you have decided where to go, sit down and make a list of the kind of clothing you will need. List only cool, comfortable clothing for summer; warm, comfortable garments for winter. The key word here is comfortable!
 Follow your clothing list in packing. (Don't forget such items as matching belts. You can buy forgotten toothpaste, but a forgotten belt can make the wearing of a favorite dress impossible.)
 Choose clothing that is easy to care for. The new wash-and-wear materials hold up well during travel. And you can take fewer garments since you can wash them and drip them dry overnight.
 If children are to accompany you, make sure that you have books and toys on your packing list. Not too many—they make too much of a clutter—but enough to keep the youngsters occupied when they tire of looking at scenery. (And they will!)
 If you're traveling by car, have a thorough check-up made of it before you start. If you're using some other kind of transportation, make an accurate list of arrivals and departures, then allow yourself plenty of time to catch whatever conveyance you're riding.
 A week or so before you leave home, notify the milkman, your newspaper, and other regular services that you will be away—and for how long. It's disconcerting to return and find stacks of
