Murphy Electric Power Board
by Mrs. Beryl Fulton

Your Lineman's Service to you. Ever watch a tree-trimming crew at work? Those men are trained to do a neat, attractive job of trimming trees. And your Electric Power Board sends them to trim trees for just one reason to help maintain day-and-night electric service to you.

Limbs falling across power lines are the Number One reason for year-round power outages. The Power Board's crew cuts the limbs that might fall and knock out your electricity.

So when you see a tree-trimming crew at work, remember this: those men are working to protect your

H. D. Delegate Attends Farm Home Week in Raleigh

Mrs. E. J. Burch, President of Valleytown Home Demonstration Club, Andrews, attended Farm Home Week at N. C. State College in Raleigh this past week as the voting delegate from Cherokee County.

Miss Thelma Wheeler, County Home Economics Agent, accompanied Mrs. Burch.

Each person carried a full schedule and among the classes given was "Sew your way to Fashion" by Miss Doris Johnson of Coats and Clark. Many interesting touches that add the professional look were demonstrated. She also emphasized that home sewing is still vogue, in fact it has picked up momentum with the fabulous assortment of fabrics available.

Another interesting feature was "Choosing carpet with Confidence". Miss Carole Winslow, Decorator with Gullistan Carpets, pointed out that Magenta is the leading color presently with purples following closely in popularity. A variation of the Axminster is in the most popular price bracket but the buyer does not concern herself with the construction. Wool is still the leading fiber for rugs with acrilon taking second place.

These are just two of the several classes in which we participate.

Sen. Jordan Reports...

By Sen. B. Everett Jordan
WASHINGTON—After many weeks of hearings and deliberations, the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry has approved a far-reaching farm bill which would go a long way toward solving many of our basic farm problems.

Those who are acquainted with our farm problems agree that the most urgent problems relate to grains—wheat, corn, and other feed grains. The bill approved by the Senate Committee provides for substantial reductions in the acreages of all these crops, which should materially reduce our burdensome surpluses and thereby reduce costs to the taxpayers.

The bill also provides for the extension of marketing orders to a sizable number of commodities not now covered, and it extends for three years the authorization of foreign sales of surplus commodities for local currencies.

Although these are the major provisions in the bill, there are many other areas of agriculture which would receive beneficial effects under it.

In many respects, the bill finally approved by the Committee did not coincide with the original requests made by Secretary of Agriculture Freeman, I use the word "original" because many modifications and changes were made at the Secretary's request after the Committee began consideration of the proposals made by the Administration.

Quite a bit of publicity has been given to proposals which would have established a system of advisory committees which would work out programs without their being approved through the normal Congressional processes.

A great deal of opposition arose to such an approach. I think most of the opposition was based on uncertainty as to what may happen under such a system to such programs as our tobacco, cotton, and peanut programs.

It was agreed that in order

Health Notes

By W. S. Cann
Health District Director

The week of July 16-23 has been set apart for special emphasis on aging. In a course on aging given at Chapel Hill recently by the School of Public Health, the group taking the course decided old age started at 80 years for the other fellow and 85 for themselves, that is, except us older ones present and we decided on 90 years or over.

This is as logical as 65 years. Bismark chose 65 years arbitrarily as retirement age in order to insure progressive promotion in his armed forces and greater loyalty to Bismark. He also indicated paying part of the soldier's pay to his family at home (forced allotment). This again to insure greater loyalty of his army and their folks to Bismark. This has been claimed by some to have been the start of the Welfare System. Bismark needed this loyalty to advance his plans for a unified and aggressive Germany.

The process of aging is the characteristic of the planet Earth and all that it contains—mountains, rivers, oceans all age and change as do all living substance.

If we accept that old age starts with the cessation of growth, that is the attainment of full maturity, then as biologist we would have to set the period of 18 to 20 years of age in the human as the start of old age. Fortunately, we have a long period of balance in which while we do not grow, we repair and mend so that actually we should remain in the balance for many years, to well over a hundred years. We don't, because of repeated irreparable damage to the body over the years. We compensate and adjust but the eventual ac-
