Indian Recognition Fight Unveiled at Holiday Homecoming

December 26, the day after Christmas, approximately 200 people turned out to get an update on what's happening concerning the concerted efforts now underway to secure an Indian Recognition bill in congress.

A number of representatives from other Indian groups across the state were present, including Chief W.R. Richardson, Haliwa Indian Tribe; Lonnie and Ruth Revels, representing the Guilford Native American Association in Guilford County; representatives from the N.C. Commission on Indian Affairs; Lumbee Regional Development Association, including executive director, Kenneth Maynor; chairman of the board of directors, Rev. James H. Woods; and a number of board of directors, including Adolph Dial, who recently served on the congressional American Indian Policy Review Commission. Representatives from the Cumberland County Association of Indian People also appeared.

Also appearing on the agenda was Helen Scheirbeck, who headed one of the task forces commissioned by the American Policy Review Commission; she headed the task force on education. Ms. Scheirbeck discussed federal recognition issues.

Adolph Dial gave a preview of the findings and recommendations of the American Review Commission.

Mrs. Janie Maynor Locklear, who heads the ad hoc committee of Federal Recognition discussed the activities of the group and called federal recognition the most important issue facing those Indians inappropriately labeled "non-federally recognized Indians" by the United States Congress. Mrs. Locklear suggested that a concerted letter writing campaign to congressmen and senators be begun. She also recommended that an address bank of all Indians be compiled so that action could be initiated quickly.

Out of the findings by the American Review Commission came a recommendation for an all encompassing Indian recognition bill which is now before the select committee headed by Senator James Abourezk, who was chairman of the review commission. The bill would do away with many of the debilitating differences between federal and non-federally recognized Indians which have been created by congressional legislation.

One of the recommendations of the ad hoc committee is that a lobbying office be established in Washington so that non-federally recognized Indians like the Lumbees could be kept abreast and have input on what is happening on the congressional level. Mrs. Locklear noted that a goal of $85,000.00 had been set to open the office. She also said that those interested in the activities of such an office should contribute to the effort.

KITCHEN FACE-LIFT
If you're plagued by the winter blahs, revamping your kitchen for a cheery, new look may be just the right project to brighten things up. It can be really simple and inexpensive to do, too. Here are some suggestions:

- To help you organize kitchen cabinets more effectively, use space savers, such as stacking shelves, drawer dividers, and storage turntables.

• During stuffy, winter months, grease and cooking fumes combine with everyday dirt and soil to form a dull-looking, greasy film which settles on all areas of the kitchen—not just the stove—on cabinets and appliances, too. To thoroughly clean away the greasy dirt, spray the grimy surfaces with Grease relief® degreaser and wipe with a damp sponge. For large jobs like laundering grease-spotted, washable curtains and table linens, apply degreaser directly to the soiled areas before laundering.

• When your kitchen is sparkling clean again, you might want to add some colorful, new table accessories such as placemats, napkin holders, or an attractive centerpiece. Many pretty, yet inexpensive, decorative items can be found in your local dime store.
