Supt. Purnell Swett in a recent interview, indicated that such a high school would probably be equally divided between Indian, Black and White children with an enrollment of a projected 600.

Purnell Swett, superintendent of Robeson County Schools, said Friday his recommendation for the new high school was based purely on educational needs, not politics.

"We could have looked at what would have been politically expedient and put a few dollars at this school and a few far as education goes we'd be getting

My concern is that every child be given the chance for a quality education," Swett said, "and that can be best done with a consolidated high school like we're proposing..

'If you build a single high school and take the staff from two high schools you can offer a more diversified curriculum that will offer solid agademic programs and vocational programs."

Swett said he had met with principals against the bond issue, saying he would

Robeson County voters will get an Magnolia and Parkton high schools to discuss the proposed consolidation.

> Under the proposal, Swett said, Magnolia and Parkton would be renovated for kindergarten through eighth grade, with all high school students

> The new high school would be built on the campus of the present Rex Rennert elementary school, doubling the classroom space at the facility.

> "There was some concern about busing," said Swett, "but we really don't consider that a major worry.

> "For one thing, if HEW (the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare) was going to enforce busing in Robeson County it would have been done in 1970," Swett said. "Now their hands are a little tied."

> Swett said he realized the new school, plus other proposals in the package not year revealed, would be a shock to some county residents.

"This is the sort of proposal I don't mind talking to anyone about," Swett dollars at that one," Swett said, "But as said, "because the aim is a better education for our children. They're the isn't what it should be.

AT MONDAY'S MEETING OF THE ROBESON COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS

The Robeson County Board of Commissioners Monday night on an unusual split vote agreed to call for the bond issue, but did not specify a date.

Board member Bobby Dean Locklear was the only commissioner to vote

Mr. Olive Pentecostal Holiness

PEMBROKE-Mrs. Iuela Chavis, project director, holds up the sign heralding the goals of Mt. Olive Pentecostal Holiness Church in the Harvest Train sponsored by the Pentecostal Holiness Conference for the Falcon Children's Home, a home for children in need.

Noted Mrs. Chavis, "The home is for all children, irregardless of race or creed." The Harvest Train is an annual expected to begin in Dunn (on Tuesday, November 21, 1978) and wind up on the Falcon Children's Home Campus later

This is the eleventh year Mrs. Chavis has served as project director of the Harvest Train for Mt. Olive Pentecostal Holiness Church.

She is shown with her pastor, Rev. Elton Bryan who is helping her load up the approximately $1,000 worth of food and other commodities gathered up by event of the churches in the conference. The Harvest Train this year is the church and Mrs. Chavis.

Possibly as early as next spring, and parent advisory groups at only vote in favor of the bonds if he was convinced that the money would be spent wisely.

"I am not convinced that the $16 million can be spent wisely with six school systems," Locklear said. "I am bitterly opposed to six school systems."

Commission H.T. Taylor, who made the motion to approve the bond issue, told Locklear he did not believe merger of the county system with five city systems should be tied to the bond

Board Chairman Herman Dial said before the vote that it is customary for bond issues to receive a unanimous vote, showing the board's endorsement of the bonds.

It just doesn't look good to have split decision," Dial said.

Before voting on the bond issue, the board rejected a substitute motion by Dial calling for a meeting with the six school superintendents and the school board chairmen, along with Dr. Craig. Allen, president of Robeson Technical

Allen, Monday night, asked that a $3.7 million building program for the ones that suffer if the school system Technical Institute be included with the school bond issue

> Allen, in a presentation prior to the bond issue vote, told the commissioners RTI needs double its classroom space immediately. He asked the county to immediately begin a massive building

Allen said he could not tell the commissioners if the RTI board wanted to be lumped together with the six school systems in the bond issue or listed on a separate ballot.

The school systems have submitted their proposals for using the bond funds if approved, but those proposals had not been given to the commissioners in writing Monday night.

Commissioner Bill Herndon questioned the motion to approve the bond issue, saying he had not yet seen the written proposal of the county system.

PEMBROKE--Through the generosity of the Pensi-Cola Bottling Co. of Lumberton, Pembroke State University has a handsome new marquee in front of its campus, advertising the many events that take place on campus.

The sign, which is illuminated at night, is 5 ft. by 9 ft. in size and mounted on an sign is painted gold and black, the school colors

The sign, counting its supply of interchangeable letters, is valued at Carlton Hawkins, vice president and general manager of the Pepsi-Cola Co. in Lumberton, said at the official presentation how delighted his company is to donate the sign to Pembroke State University: "As a member of the business community, we want to do our part to promote the community itself and especially Pembroke State Univers- university," Dr. Jones said. ity because it is a community affair. We are delighted to present this sign to Pembroke State University. We hope it will be beneficial to them--and are sure it will be."

Accepting the sign on behalf of the University was Dr. English E. Jones, chancellor, who said: "Since the sign has gone up, we have received wonderful response from throughout the area relative to its effectivenese. In the past we have had many outstanding programs--not only in sports but in our Lyceum Series and by visiting artists--and the community needed to be made more aware of them. This sign does it.

"Today at our administrative council neeting, it was remarked how tremenus the effectiveness of the sign has been in attracting people to our various university performances. Yesterday > the director of our dramatic programs remarked that the sign is doing wonders for Pembroke State University.

"I'm grateful for it. It is something to which we have looked forward for some time. I've hesitated in the past to put a sign in front of the campus because I did not want to detract from the general edifice made of stucco and steel. The appearance of the school. This sign doesn't detract, it enhances that appearance.

> "Everything we know of that is important and is happening in the community we make a note of everyone traveling the road in front of the campus will see it.

> Dr. Jones expressed his deep thanks to Hawkins and Pepsi-Cola for the sign. "I'm eternally grateful to Mr. Hawkins and Pepsi-Cola for helping us to do this. I can assure him it's going to be used and be one of the greatest assets to the

Much of the credit for making the marquee a reality can be attributed to Walter Ozendine, director of resource development at PSU. "Walter was probably the motivating factor behind it all," said Hawkins. "He and I have kept Oxendine initially contacted Hawkins and has been behind the project all the way. Looking at the sign upon its completion, Oxendine smiled. "It is one of the greatest things we've had to happen on our campus. It has increased attendance at the various functions on campus. "We've had a lot of people to tell us that this increase has been due basically to the sign. With it as a reminder, students and people throughout our community have been able to see and keep abreast of what's takin place on our campus."

ELECTION: IN WASHINGTON STATE CUNNINGHAM LOSES, FOLEY WINS

Rep. John Cunningham, who introduced legislation to abrogate Indian treaty rights, will not be back on Capital Hill. He lost to a liberal Democrat, Mike Lowry. Tom Foley, whom Mel Tonasket hoped to unseat, won by a narrow margin over Duane Alton. Tonasket, running as an independent, was reported as gaining about eight percent of the vote--apparently not quite enough to achieve his goal. In other races: Sen. William Hathaway of Maine, who pushed through White House approval for an Indian land claims settlement plan that would not cost the voters of Maine one cent, found that was not enough. He lost to William Cohen, who has the distinction of being described by the Wahington Star as "a poet and former college basketball star." Maine's former attorney general Joseph Brennan, who has been a steadfast opponent of most of the negotiated settlement attempts with the Indians, was elected governor. In South Dakota, another former attorney general William Janklow, not generally considered a great friend of the Indians, "was elected governor. In Arizona, however, Governor Bruce Babbitt, who had won Navajo Tribal Chairman Peter Mac-Donald's support by pledging support of the tribe's self-determination efforts, was re-elected. Neither of the architects of the upcoming changes in Indian education required by P.L. 95-561 (formerly H.R. 15) will be back in the House. Rep. Albert Quie was elected governor of Minnesota and Rep. Michael Blouin of Iowa was defeated.

11th Annual Robeson Co. 'College Night' PEMBROKE--Wednesday,

Nov. 29, from 7 to 9 p.m., will be the 11th annual Robeson County "College Night" at Pembroke State University, providing high school juniors and seniors in Robeson County an opportunity to learn first hand about the colleges and universities of their choices.

Representatives of approximately 76 institutions of higher learning will visit Pembroke State University to explain the merits of their respective schools and provide brochures, etc. They will represent universities, colleges, community colleges, technic institutes, business college hospitals and military.

Their being present in a group saves students and parents the expense of traveling to the schools to obtain information.

"College Night" will take place in the Auxiliary Gymnasium of Pembroke State University's Jones Health and Physical Education Center.

Questions on admissions requirements, financial aid, etc., will be answered by the representatives of the different schools. Student and parents may move at will from one college booth to another where literature will be displayed.

This is the sixth year that the "Robeson County College Night" at PSU has been conducted in one huge room. Because of this approach, students can visit more school representatives.

"We are expecting some 1,500 high school students for this college night," said Dr. Norma Jean Thompson, dean of admissions and registration at PSU.

Talking to prospective PSU students will be Warren Baker, director of admissions, Sam Cain and Anthony Locklear, admissions counselors; and Dr. Thompson.

All superintendents, other administrative officials and school counselors from Robeson County administrative units are invited to "College Night." The superintendents include Purnell Swett, Robeson County schools; I.J. Wicker, Red Springs; Douglas Y. Young, Maxton; Leon M. McLean, Fairmont; and Don-ald Kennedy, St. Pauls. And Gilbert Caroll, Lumberta
