Gov. Hunt receives 'First in Flight' Plates

RALEIGH--The graphic "First in Flight" license plate debuted on January 11, 1982. Secretary W.R. "Bill" Roberson Jr. of the North Carolina Department of Transportation (NCDOT) presented Governor Jim Hunt with the official "Number 1" license plate to announce the initial series of the new graphic plates.

The design of the new graphic license plate has the words "North Carolina" and "First in Flight" imprinted in red, the numbers cast in blue, and the Wright airplane printed in light blue.

The phrase "First in Flight" will first appear on the personalized and official plates. Approximately 28,500 personalized plates and 897 official plates with graphic design are being mailed and should be received by vehicle owners no later than February 15, 1982, said Division of Motor Vehicles (DMV) officials.

The personalized plates and official plates (issued to officials like legislators, judges, Council of State, etc.) are issued annually at a cost of $10, plus the regular license fee. The plates will have the year embossed on the upper corner of the plate.

Officials at DMV note that those owners renewing under the staggered registration system will receive non-graphic plates until their current inventory of approximately 200,000 non-graphic plates is exhausted. These officials anticipate the non-graphic plate inventory will be depleted by late March 1982. The last plate number in the non-graphic series is ZRZ999.

Once the non-graphics are depleted, vehicle owners will receive the new graphic plates. The graphic plate being issued at the local branch offices will carry the numbers AAA11 through ZZZ100. The mail order service from DMV in Raleigh will be issuing graphic plates in the series ZSA101 through ZZZ999.

The non-graphic plates have been designed for multi-year use. When they become illegible, the non-graphic plates can be exchanged at DMV or at a local branch office at no charge. The series AAA101 through JAY 999, in use since 1975, are being recalled due to their illegible, rusty or faded condition. All plates in this series will be replaced by August 15, 1982.

The non-graphic plate can be secured by a vehicle owner who desires to replace a currently valid plate with a "First in Flight" graphic plate by paying a replacement fee of $9.00.

The department of Corrections' Enterprise Section located at Central Prison manufactures the graphic plates at the rate of approximately 15,000 per day. In 1975 DMV first began issuing permanent license plates made of steel. Because of the process of deterioration, DMV officials switched to aluminum plates. The new graphic plates made of aluminum will be used as long as the configurations on the plate are legible.

State Senator Hensen Barnes of Wayne County, State Senator Monk Harrington of Bertie County, and State representative Dan Lilley of Lenior County actively supported legislation authorizing the "First in Flight" plates.

GOVERNOR HUNT RECEIVES "FIRST IN FLIGHT" LICENSE PLATE-- North Carolina Department of Transportation (NCDOT) Secretary W.R. "Bill" Roberson Jr. (right) presented Gov. Jim Hunt with the first "First in Flight" license plate in the Old House Chambers in the Capitol Building in Raleigh.

Monday, January 11. Also present was R.W. Wilkins Jr. (left), newly appointed Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.
