Highway Patrol begins Training

The State Highway Patrol began its 70th Basic Training School February 13 with forty-three cadets reporting to the Patrol Training Center in Raleigh for the twenty-two week training program. The Patrol reported that two females and nine black males are among the new cadets. "If those attending successfully complete the school, our total complement of uniformed personnel will include four females, fifty-seven black males and twelve Indian males," Patrol Commander Colonel John T. Jenkins said. "We are hopeful that all cadets will graduate as we have an urgent need to have more troopers on the highways," Jenkins concluded.

Captain C.D. Fox, Director of Patrol Training, reported that cadets are required to successfully complete more than one thousand hours of instruction pertaining to ninety-three subjects. According to Fox, the Patrol's Basic Training School is recognized as one of the best of its kind in the nation. The present school is scheduled to end July 16. According to Jenkins, the Patrol is seeking qualified minority and female applicants. He encouraged all persons interested in Patrol employment to apply now as the school will probably be scheduled for the latter part of 1982.

Here are some more salad recipes. A good salad will tease the appetite; it also adds color and charm to the table. Be sure the salad plates are cold, before you serve them; and that the salad you serve blends with the rest of the meal.
