Two Pembroke Residents Graduate from N.C. School of Science and Mathematics

by Glenna Hicks

Two Pembroke residents received high school diplomas during First Commencement exercises at the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics in Durham last Saturday, Stephanie Dawn Locklear, daughter of Mr. Nocie Locklear and Mrs. Joyce Thompson, and Carmen Elizabeth Dietrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Dietrich, were two of the onehundred and thirty-five members of the first graduating class at NCSSM.

Carmen and Stephanie became interested in the School of Science and Mathematics when they were sophomores at Pembroke Senior High School. The then principal Dr. Vernon R. Thompson, brought the opportunities offered by the new school to the attention of the students and their parents. Both Stephanie and Carmen performed well there. Families and friends are extremely proud of them. In August, Stephanie will become a student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Carmen will enroll at North Carolina

The graduation exercises began in Cameron Indoor Stadium on the Duke University Campus at 10:30 a.m. and continued for two hours. The time passed quickly, however, due to the quality of the speeches and the musical presentations. Among those on the podium were Governor James B. Hunt, who receives the lions share of the political credit for the extablishment of the school. His personal interest in the students has been manifest from the beginning and, in his remarks, Hunt assured them again that he would be forever interested in their lives, individually and as a group. "You students are our best," the Governor said, "...Our best and our bright-

The purpose and significance of the School of Science and Mathematics were perhaps best defined by writer John Ehle as he reflected pon the way things used to be in education in North Carolina and the beginnings of a turn-around suggested by the new school. Ehle noted that in the not so distant past. North Carolina schools seemed most intent on "helping students to become average." To give special attention to academically talented was thought to be "undemocratic" and "elitist." This attitude toward academics was and is in sharp contrast to treatment of athletics. "Athletics are the best taught subjects in our state," Ehle said, and remarked that teachers "need to learn from coaches." He pointed out that no one wanted an "average" basket ball team or sought to bring a track star down to an "average performance." The School of Science and Mathematics was established to give North Carolina's best students the best education they could get. Ehle concluded by urging the students to "go to college where you please, but come home," when their higher education is completed.

"What we are about," he said. "is the saving of our civilization."

The main address was given by Dr. Lewis M. Branscomb who built upon the thoughts previously voiced by Ehle and Hunt. Branscomb, a member of the Board of Trustees of NCSSM, is Vice President and Chief Scientist of the IBM Corporation. He titled his address, "The Opportunity to be Best," which is the purpose of the school for its students. He linked the state of the economy to educational excellence, saydownward trend of the economy can only be reversed through science and technology. Branscomb told the students to feel science as well as think it and ended with the admonition that they should not neglect philosophy, art and music on the esthetic side of life. Students, too, had an active part in the graduation ceremonies. Tonya Lynette Smith. a member of the graduating class, spoke from the platform on the topic "We begin a greater challenge." The student WindEnsemble played the Processional and Recessional, and there was a selection sung by the Student

After the conferring of diplomas by the Director, Dr. Charles R. Eilber, the commencement exercises moved to the NCSSM campus where the first graduating class buried a time capsule to be opened twenty-five years hence. The capsule contained video tapes, notes from student talks, an empty pizza box, and a class picture, among other things. The formal ceremonies concluded with a reception on the lawn where the main attraction was a cake approximately three feet wide and eight feet long. That left only bringing out the

OXENDINE GOES PROFESSIONAL

David Oxendine of Pembroke has gone professional in the theater arts. Oxendine, a dean's list student, is a 1982 graduate of Catawba College, having majored in drama, with a minor in speech. While at Catawba, Oxendine starred in many performances, and has received several awards for his acting, including best actor, and most outstanding actor. While at Catawba, Oxendine was inducted into the Phi-Epison honor society.

In addition to Catawba studies, Oxendine has studied at the State Theatre of North Carolina in Flat Rock, N.C. for two seasons, and also the National Shakespeare Company, based in New York City.

During July, Oxendine will join the Alpha-Omega Players based in Rockport, Texas. This is a select group of professional actors, booked throughout the United States. and Canada. While there he will perform in four popular Broadway hit plays that will tour the country for 9 months. Oxendine states this tour will further his training and provide the opportunity to see all parts of the nation.

Oxendine, a graduate of Pembroke Senior High School received many awards and honors while enrolled there. He was president of the Drama Club, member of the high school band, Spanish Club, and was listed in by two motives only: the "Who's Who Among Ameri- drive to get money and can High School Students."
