

Eagles calls for Run off in Judge's race

Sidney S. Eagles, Jr., Raleigh Attorney and Candidate for the Court of Appeals seat being vacated by Judge Robert Martin, announced today that he had requested that a second primary be held to name the Democratic nominee.

Eagles, an Asheville native, lived in Canton, North Carolina as a child while his parents were employed by Champion Papers of Canton. Eagles was reared in rural Wilson County's Saratoga Township, where his parents still reside.

Eagles ran a close second to Paul Wright of Goldsboro getting 41.6% of total vote. The third candidate, Zennie Riggs of Jacksonville, garnered 15.5% of the total cast. Unofficial returns indicate that 477,000 votes were cast in this race in the June 29th primary.

In announcing his call for a second primary Eagles thanked the voters for coming to the polls on June 29th and urged them to continue to participate on July 27th.

He noted that: "It appears that candidates in local, legislative and congressional races are eligible to call for run-off elections involving approximately 50 counties. Many have already done so. Second primary elections may be held in all those counties without regard for any action by me. Also, I understand that there will be another statewide primary for judicial office.

Since the early morning hours of last Wednesday, I have heard from, or talked with literally hundreds of lawyers, judges, Democratic Party leaders and voting citizens from all across North Carolina.

Without exception, their advice has been to urge me to call for a second primary. A second primary will guarantee that our Party's nominee has the support of at least 50% of our Party's participating voters.

After prayerful consideration and consultation with others whose judgement I respect, today by letter to the State Board of Elections Executive Director, Alex Brock, I have requested that a second primary election be conducted in my race.

I congratulate both of my opponents in the first primary of their showing. I solicit the support of all North Carolina Democrats-especially those who did not vote in this race last Tuesday and those who voted for my friend, Mr. Riggs."

Commenting on difficulties in a statewide judicial campaign, Eagles observed:

"One problem was the constraint imposed on debate of issues by the canons of judicial ethics. The canons are ideally suited to situations where judges are appointed and thereafter run against their record, as is the case in several Missouri Plan states. They are ill-suited, however, to a partisan election process in which people expect to know and are entitled to know where the candidates stand on issues of legal philosophy and any other questions except specific cases coming before the courts to which the candidates aspire.

This campaign has proven to me that the canons of the judicial ethics need to be revised for North Carolina. So long as we elect our judges, we need to be able to hear the candidates express their views and philosophies. When a person is nominated for a federal judicial position, members of the Senate ask questions. The nominee is not prohibited from giving answers so long as they do not deal with matters before the court. Those questions could not be answered under our State rules. I would like to talk about my views on prison for criminals, restitution for the victims of crime, freedom of the press to cover court proceedings and freedom of religion for us all-I'd like to let the voters judge me accordingly.

I promise now, regardless of the outcome of this election to work for such a change."

Eagles ended his remarks with a reminder to his supporters and friends that the second primary would be like beginning fresh.

"Nothing can be taken for granted. To those who supported me in the first primary campaign, I ask that you redouble your efforts to reach the uncommitted and assure that our friends do vote on Second Primary Election Day.

July 27th.

There is no doubt that we can win. There is no doubt that we will win if we commit ourselves with enthusiasm to the task of a midsummer campaign."

Voting Rights Act extended

William Bradford Reynolds, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Civil Rights Division, today issued the following statement:

"President Reagan's signing of the Voting Rights Act extension into law Tuesday marked yet another significant milestone in the history of this important legislation.

"Primary responsibility for enforcement of the Act rests with the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice, which has over the years compiled an impressive record in its fight to protect the rights of minorities to fully and fairly participate in the electoral process.

"Under Attorney General Smith, the Division's current level of enforcement activity surpasses that of any prior administration, and, as a consequence, minority voters are increasingly taking their places alongside whites in the voting lines without fear of reprisal or intimidation because of race.

"The Civil Rights Division will not rest on past accomplishments. Now that the extension is law, we pledge to maintain our enforcement efforts in this area at the same high level. Our litigation responsibilities under Section 2 of the Act and preclearance responsibilities under Section 5 of the Act will continue to receive the highest priority so that the Congressional mandate that all be afforded an equal opportunity to participate in the electoral process, without regard to race, color, creed or membership in a language minority group, will indeed become a reality."
