What Makes America Great?

The Reverend Edward Smith, Minister of the Chestnut Street United Methodist Church in Lumberton spoke at the Tuesday evening meeting of the Pembroke Kiwanis on the topic "What Makes America Great." He was introduced to the Club members by Program Chairman Gibson Gray.

"Service clubs," said Reverend Smith, "address themselves to serving the community and to the welfare of the Country."

Alexis DeToqueville in his search for the roots of democracy in America found them not in its various institutions but rather in its churches. The source of the greatness of this country is its goodness-the goodness of the land, the question of rights vs. the privileged, the fact that the country has changed from mono-lingual to a poly-lingual language, our judicial system in spite of its possible breakdown at times because of its large number of cases still remains the best system for justice. However, we do need discipline in order to respect the rights of all.

Presiding at the meeting was Club President John L. Carter. Singing was led by Lankford Godwin and the invocation was delivered by Alvin Ray Lowry.

The subject for today's lesson: Maintaining Moral Discipline.

Taken from 1st Corinthians Today's lesson reminds us that when we are saved we become disciples of Christ and must there-into conform our life to Christ.

A person who is liberated in Christ, however is free from the slavery of sin and possesses a power which puts him in control of his lusts and passions.

One problem the Corinthian Church faced was members engaging in sexual practices; fornication in particular.

Our lesson does not imply that all members of the Corinthian Church were fornicators, but even if there were only one case, this was bad enough.

It may have been in response to the church's refusal to deal with the problem of fornication that Paul spoke of it as leaven, "A little leaven leaveth the whole lump."

If the church ignored sin, the entire church eventually would be affected by it. But if the church stood against fornication, it would bring fear to the guilty ones.

The church is responsible for its members-both to teach and to edify them.

If a church is to be all God wants to be, its members must be subject to discipline and chastening.

A sinning member cannot appropriate the ministries of the church if he is allowed to live under the illusion that his unrighteousness is acceptable. Here Paul turned to another problem in the church, dating those who were dispute with others to settle their disputes in a Christian way. The problem was serious. In looking at this problem of the ancient church, we get a glimpse of a problem which arises in the churches of our day. How sad for the church, as glorious as it is, to be reduced to childish bickering and squabbling. But such is the case and we must deal with this when it gets out of hand.

There were some Christians in Corinth had set up their own requirements for living the spiritual life. These were the libertines. Paul quoted them as saying, "All things are lawful." That is, they were not bound by any law. It is not true that everything works for the good of the church, for some things are not even important for the church.

Actions which lead to spiritual bondage on which fail to lead people to new spiritual heights are not by love and are not worth the effort.

The Senior class got the attendance banner. The teacher for that class is Mrs. Dianna Blue.

The Bible class put on a program of singing. The teacher is Mrs. Ella Baker. Please remember all our sick loved ones.
