

Libertarians hold "Kick off" Dinner

The Cape Fear Libertarians held a "campaign kick-off" dinner for Richard Hollembeak, candidate for United States House of Representatives in District 7. The dinner was held at Whitey's Restaurant in Wilmington. In his opening words, Hollembeak informed the press that he was running for office "in self defense against government interference in my life and the lives of all Americans." Hollembeak was officially nominated by the North Carolina Libertarian Party in Raleigh in April. "Interest in the Libertarian Party and philosophy is growing rapidly in this state," he said. "This is no surprise to me," he added, "Americans are tired of ever-increasing tax burdens and regulations for virtually every activity in which they attempt to participate." He further stated as his goals for running this campaign being, "The survival of FREEDOM in America. If elected, I will see to it that the size of government is reduced and that Americans will be freed once again!" Also attending the meeting and giving his endorsement and support to Mr. Hollembeak, was Steve Hess, Libertarian candidate for N.C. House in District 13. John Ahrens, an assistant Professor of Philosophy at UNCW was on hand to explain how the Libertarian Party differs from the Republicans and Democrats. "The basic difference between the two political philosophies is that the Republicans and the Democrats can't agree about who to steal from and who to give to. The Libertarians think government has no right to steal from anyone and give to anyone," is how he summed up his speech. The film that was shown was entitled, "We Hold These Truths..." It is a documentary film prepared by the National Libertarian Party. The message it portrayed was that we have too much government control over our private lives. "Republicans and Democrats seek more and more power and Libertarians seek less and less power for government," the film stated. It stated that the government has no place in the economy. After the film and speeches the meeting broke up into an informal face-to-face question and answer session. Professor Ahrens told supporters and press that the Libertarian Party meetings as a rule were very informal. He felt that people could get their own personal questions answered better that way. When asked about the Social Security is a pyramid scheme. I believe this program should be completely voluntary! The government should get out of the insurance business. It is not the responsibility of government to take care of people who have not made proper arrangements for their retirement." He added, "I think people who are presently receiving social security benefits should receive the remainder of the money they paid in in one lump sum. Furthermore, people who have been forced to pay into this system should be paid back the money they have paid in. From that point on, the system should be on a voluntary basis." "The Libertarian answer for the unemployment epidemic is this," he told a supporter, "If the government would stop trying to create non-existent jobs and free up the economy, by lowering taxes and stopping regulation on business, business would be in a position to create real jobs. In a free market society where supply and demand are the rule, the more people worked, the more people could buy and the more people could work." Mr. Hollembeak has a very definite answer for people who questioned him about foreign policy matters. "Our military personnel should protect the United States borders and no other country's borders. The government spends billions of dollars annually to aid foreign countries. Most of which are able to financially defend themselves." Hollembeak supporters expressed optimism about his chances of winning. "People are tired of the same old story." Don't forget to oil your sewing machine. When you have oiled it, sew through a blotter to absorb the excess oil. Plants make excellent gifts for those who like to work in their yards. They can be enjoyed the year round. Books can be enjoyed for many years and they make a great last minute gift.

It's now possible to grow an entire organism from a single cell taken from a parent organism. It's already been done successfully with plants, but it's still the subject of science fiction in reference to humans. What's the process called? Cloning. Scientists learned how to clone organisms through the study of biotechnology, which involves the use of living organisms or their components to solve practical, industrial and medical problems.
