JIM VALVANO, SUSANNAH MCCORKLE SHOULD PROVIDE EXCITING EVENING

Through noon last Wednesday 196 tickets had been sold to PSU's Kickoff Dinner, scheduled Tuesday, Nov. 9, at PSU's Jones Health and Physical Education Center.

That means $9,600 worth of tickets. This is money for which PSU has checks or cash. In this homestretch part of the ticket drive much more money is expected to come in. This has always been the case in the first two fund-raising dinners with many people waiting until the last minute to purchase tickets.

"Tickets will be sold at the door," announced Dr. Richard Plesano, PSU director of institutional advancement who is in charge of the ticket drive.

Anyone desiring tickets may telephone his office at 521-4214, Ext. 252, and he will get the tickets to you.

The twin attraction of dynamic Jim Valvano speaking at the dinner—and later a singing performance by pretty Susannah McCorkle should make for an exciting evening.

Valvano, the N.C. State basketball coach, is described as "a great inspirational speaker" by Ed Seaman, sports information director of the Wolfpack. Ed, who is a longtime friend of ours, says: "there is no one in these parts who can compare with Jim Valvano as a speaker. Pembroke State may not get anyone else that dynamic in 10 years."

The dinner starts at 6 p.m. The performance by Susannah McCorkle follows at 8 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center.

Last year Valvano coached N.C. State to a 22-9 record and a spot in the NCAA National Tournament. His first Wolfpack squad two years ago captured the ECAC Holiday Festival Classic in Madison Square Garden.

Remember that money from this $50-a-plate dinner goes for: (1) student scholarships, (2) the radio and TV center, (3) student recruitment and University promotion, and (4) faculty development.

If you haven't already done so, why don't you support PSU by attending this one time-a-year event?

ANNUAL GIVING CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE HAS LUNCHEON FRIDAY

As a concluding note to their ticket drive to the fund-raising dinner, the 30 members of PSU's Annual Giving Campaign will have a luncheon at noon Friday in the Chancellor's Dining Room at the University. Much more cash for ticket sales is expected to be turned in there.

Chiropractors specialize in studying human bodies, particularly the human spinal column. Researchers continuously point out all organs and parts of the human body are controlled by the brain. Chiropractors are trained to detect spinal subluxations (vertebrae which are out of place). When bones in the neck or back are out of place, they can pinch or irritate nerves making you sick. When nerves don't work that control your body or certain parts of your body, what will happen to you?

If you are sick, consult a chiropractor or dial 739-0693 and talk your health problem over with Dr. Roff, 4992 Fayetteville Rd., Lumberton, N.C.
