THAT'S PROGRESS

Millionth Eagle Scout

A $1,000 college scholarship, life membership in the National Eagle Scout Association, a sterling silver Eagle badge, and a special certificate denoting his honor were awarded to 13-year-old Alex Holsinger of Normal, Illinois, when he became the millionth young man to be an Eagle Scout.

The eighth grade honor student, accomplished musician, and league-leading soccer captain, also got a phone call from President Reagan, appearances on network television, and lots of media attention.

Becoming an Eagle Scout isn't easy. Only 2.5 percent of the young men who enroll as Scouts, earn the Eagle badge. It was first awarded in 1912. Among famous Americans who have received Scouting's top rank, perhaps the best known is former President Gerald R. Ford.

Holsinger, of Troop 29, sponsored by the Chiddix Junior High School PTA, passed more than 800 specific requirements en route to earning his Eagle badge. Many of them reflect his personal interest in the environmental sciences.

For his service project, the youth directed and worked on the restoration of an abandoned and historic cemetery. He is senior patrol leader of his troop—the top youth leadership position—and plans to attend the World Scout Jamboree near Calgary, Canada in 1983.

The millionth Eagle Scout, who can really soar.
