

LRDA IN ACTION

by Garry Lewis Barton
LRDA Public Relations Officer

This was LRDA's float entry in the Pembroke Jaycee-sponsored Christmas Parade that snaked its way through downtown Pembroke Friday, December 10th. LRDA's float won second prize in best non-commercial float.

The following units were also awarded prizes in Friday's parade:
Best non-commercial float: The Native American Association from Fairmont High School, first place; the LRDA float, second place; and Prospect High School, third place.
Best marching band: Max-

ton High School, first place; Prospect High, second place; and South Robeson High, third place; best elementary school: Pembroke Elementary.
Best marching unit: Pembroke ROTC.

Mr. Earl Hughes Oxendine is shown talking to children of LRDA's South Hoke Day Care Center Nov. 19th as the tificates of appreciation to four community people for their fine efforts which have made the community a better place in which to live while at the same time assuring a brighter future for the children. Ms. Lynneett Jacobs, LRDA's Day Care Program Director presented the certificate to Mr. Earl Hughes Oxendine, member of LRDA's Board of Directors; Mr. James Hunt, Hoke County Commissioner; Mr. Hank Richards, South Hoke Elementary School Principal; and Mr. Charles Davis who accepted the certificate on behalf of Mr. James Martin, Hoke County Manager.

The South Hoke Day Care Center is an authorized center under the auspices of the State Department of Human Resources. Interested parents who need quality day care services at minimal cost should contact Ms. Pearl Brooks, Director of South Hoke Day Care Center, at 875-5777 between the hours of 6:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. [Garry Barton Photo]

Merry Christmas! Pembroke Officials attend National Meet

Los Angeles, Calif.
Pembroke Mayor Pete Jacobs, Councilmen Larry T. Brooks and Sam Dial and town manager McDuffie Cummings heard President Reagan address the leaders of the nation's cities last week as nearly 4,000 local government officials convened for the annual meeting of the National League of Cities.

The 1982 Congress of Cities the largest gathering of municipal leaders from around the country, focused this year on issues related to the president's "New Federalism" plan to restructure many federal, state and local government relationships. The five-day meeting was built around four symposiums and dozens of related work shops on taxation and finance, local development, individual rights and the growing role of the courts in local government operations.
NLC President Ferd L.

Harrison, mayor of Scotland Neck, NC, addressed the opening general session prior to President Reagan's speech and told the delegates that the challenge of the 1980s will be to match the responsibilities of each level of government with the proper resources to do the job.

Gov. Scott Matheson of Utah, chairman of the National Governor's Association also addressed the meeting and met with NLC's leaders to start work on a high priority program in 1983 to build better state-local relationships. The meeting concluded a year long process of national municipal policy review by the League and set in motion a concerted effort to win congressional reauthorization of the General Revenue Sharing program for local governments. The present authorization for the program, which began in 1972, expires at the end of 1983.

"ONE WITH THE EARTH" ART EXHIBIT ON DISPLAY

A traveling exhibit of renowned contemporary art works entitled "One With The Earth" is currently on display to the public at PSU's Native American Resource Center which is located in the Old Main building. The exhibit, comprised of works of art by approximately 50 Native Americans, will remain on display until the end of January.

"One With The Earth" originated as a 1976 Bicentennial joint effort by the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Institute of American Indian Art in Sante Fe, New Mexico. The art exhibit is being made available to the public due to the combined efforts of Lumbree Regional Development Association which financed the exhibit and is responsible for bringing it to this area, and Pembroke State University which houses the exciting exhibit of some 60 works of art.

According to a PSU spokesman, "One With The Earth" is "one of the biggest we've had at Pembroke." Ms. Linda Oxendine, curator of PSU's Native American Resource Center reports that the exhibit is "an extraordinary collection... We've had excellent response and quite a large number of students to come (and view the exhibit). Not only students," she interjects, "but a lot of others (as well)."

The exhibit contains a wide spectrum of art styles, including traditional beadwork, weavings, wood and marble sculptures, ceramics, oil paintings, and much much more.

"The objects in the exhibition," noted a booklet about the art exhibit by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, "represent a cross section of contemporary efforts in the arts by members of America's Indian tribes who are proudly contributing to a continuum that began thousands of years ago."

"One With The Earth" has appeared in at least 19 cities throughout the U.S. since it first began touring. After the PSU engagement, it will be appearing at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C. Don't miss it!
