OF CONTESTS

Unusual Contest Offers Lifetime Chances

(NAPS)—Recent scientific advancements have given new hope to victims of breast cancer. New and unique ways to raise money to help support breast cancer research also are on the rise.

The fervor to help raise money to fight breast cancer is due to the fact that 185,000 new cases of breast cancer are reported annually, making it the second most common form of cancer in women, according to the American Cancer Society.

In a massive effort to help combat the disease, creative ways to raise money are cropping up throughout the country. In Newport, Ore., the owners of the Driftwood Village motel are holding a contest to give away their oceanfront motel appraised at $1 million in an effort to raise money for the cause. For the price of a well-worded essay and entry fee, contestants have a chance of a lifetime to win nearly three acres, overlooking four miles of pristine Oregon coastline, complete with a 12-unit motel, all for a good cause. More contest details can be found at www.driftwoodcontest.com.

The motel owners will donate all proceeds from the contest, beyond the market value of the property, to help support cancer research. The contest has the potential of raising nearly $400,000 to help in the fight against breast cancer.

To enter the Driftwood Village contest, participants need to compose an essay about why they want to own the Driftwood Village motel. The owners have set a goal of collecting 7,500 entries. Any entry fees over 7,500, up to 10,000, will be donated to help in the fight against cancer. Entry fees will be returned if a sufficient number of entries are not received by the contest deadline, Sept. 30, 2001. If and when 10,000 entries are received, the contest will end, and a winner will be selected.

For more information, visit www.driftwoodcontest.com. Contest rules and information also are available by writing to Driftwood Motel-Contest, 1215 NE Lakewood, Newport, Oregon 97365 or by calling 1-800-ESSAYES (877-2993).

Willie Oxendine works on blueprints of a steel structure at his Wilmington office.

Specialty is at the core of all steel buildings

By JOE KESSLER
Star-News Correspondent

Willie E. Oxendine tallies on his fingers the things "that never cease to amaze me after three and a half decades in this business."

First, though steel detailing is a vitally important function, few people have ever heard of it.

Second, those who have usually think it involves polishing or somehow shaping steel, which it doesn't.

Third, it is highly rewarding work both in job satisfaction and pay, but there is a serious shortage of trained people.

Fourth, only five schools in the United States offer detailing training, and four of them are out West.

Mr. Oxendine is president of SENC Steel Detailing Inc. on Vidges Road in Wilmington.

The company prepares drawings for steel-frame construction projects — highly detailed drawings specifying the dimensions of every piece of steel including where and how they connect to each other, where bolt holes should be, and where welding is to be done. No structure using steel as its frame can go forward until the steel detailer has done his work.

The process of detailing starts with drawings provided by a project architect and structural engineer. These documents are then submitted to a steel fabricator who provides steel to a general contractor and employs the detailer.

SENC, which stands for Southeast North Carolina, is a family company employing four Oxendines and one soon-to-be Oxendine. Mr. Oxendine, 52, with 35 years of experience, is president, and his wife, Mary, is secretary-treasurer. Willie Jr., 33, is the chief draftsman; and 32-year-old Scott is a detailer. Lisa Autry, Scott's fiancée, is office manager.

"I could virtually triple my business overnight if I had the staff to serve all the jobs that come my way."

Willie E. Oxendine, steel detailer and retains Queensboro as a major account. His firm has prepared drawings for construction in 13 states from Texas to New York.

Local projects detailed by SENC include PPD Inc.'s headquarters on South 17th Street, Parsley Elementary School and structures at the Lumina II complex on Eastwood Road.

Of the items on Mr. Oxendine's "amazing" list, the most vexing is the dearth of trained detailing personnel — a situation also considered a major problem by The National Institute of Steel Detailing, headquartered in Oakland, Calif.

"I could virtually triple my business overnight if I had the staff to serve all the jobs that come my way," Mr. Oxendine says.

"Gee, maybe a qualified detailer will see this article and apply for a job," he concludes with a wistful sigh.
