

of its continuing at least as high as 50s. during the summer, and on the approach of winter it will no doubt rise.

Low descriptions of Cotton are scarce in the market, which causes them to keep their present prices. The last arrivals from Charleston have been principally Sea Islands.

We are this day favoured with American papers announcing the unpleasant resolutions [alluding to the resolution of Mr. Nicholson for prohibiting the importation of certain British goods] which have passed in the House of Representatives. It is the general belief here that the Senate will not be so in-temperate as to sanction these proceedings. If they do I cannot see the least advantage that can result to your country from such a mode of conduct. America is certainly as yet but a child, not arrived at sufficient maturity to dictate laws to age and experience.

Extract of another letter from a respectable house in Liverpool to their correspondents in Philadelphia.

"The gloom which overspread our market upon the first intelligence of the commercial aggressions of Prussia, was in a great degree very unexpectedly dispersed, by government having announced that ships under Pappenburgh and Knyphusen colours may clear out for any of the ports in Holland or Sweden; and is now further dispelled, by the official notification, that Hamburg, Bremen and Oldenburg ships may clear out for any port under blockade upon conditions of returning to Great-Britain within three months. These privileges will be of essential benefit to the holders of West-India produce, and our cotton market partakes of this advantage in a high degree, since it is now clearly ascertained that channels are still open for an intercourse with the continent, and it is to be hoped that the inconveniences usually attendant on new arrangements will speedily be surmounted.

"At first it was not doubted that a system of complete exclusion had been formed, and that Swedish Pomerania would be destined to swell the catalogue of plundered provinces, previously to its cession to Prussia; but whether this boon is considered by his imperial majesty as too great for his faithful protegee, or circumstances are not ripe in that quarter, it is not easy to determine.

"Though war has not yet been actually declared against Prussia, it is generally expected, and the recent orders from government, not to pay any money on account of freights of the detained cargoes, shew that the dispute is not in a train of amicable adjustment; indeed what can be expected by negotiation with a government which has lost its independence without striking a blow? Prussia must now send to Paris for instructions. Political topics have usually been considered as irrelevant in commercial correspondence; but now, when the cause of almost every alteration in our prices may be distinctly traced to some political event, the unfortunate alliance of commerce with politics is become too evident, and we could not state with sufficient precision the causes which influence our prices, if we omitted the weight of them all."

Extract of a letter from Leeds, (Eng) April 30.

"This forenoon there is a terrible alarm. It is said your government have passed the NON-IMPORTANT LAW. I do not in the least doubt, it this news is confirmed, it will cause an immediate embargo on American shipping.
