WILL BE PUBLISHED

With all the expedition consistent with the nature of the proceedings,

THE TRIAL OF

THOMAS O. SELFRIDGE.

WHENEVER questions of public concern, involving either the liberty or life of a citizen, offer themselves to the decision of the supreme authority, the public are necessarily a party, and deeply interested in the event. On the present occasion, the citizens throughout the Union, will not only expect, but demand, an impartial, full and unbiased history of the facts, and an application of the law to those facts, in a case, which has already excited the public feeling more than any occurrence which has ever taken place in this country. In order to meet what we believe to be the public wishes, we have engaged Mr. LLOYD, (late Reporter of the Debates of Congress) to report a circumstantial, and faithful detail of the Trial. Thus the public will have an opportunity of knowing the sense both of the Court and Jury, and of course will be enlightened in one of the most solemn, awful, and interesting cases which ever offered itself to a human tribunal.

The stenographical and literary abilities of Mr. LLOYD have deservedly ranked him among the literati of our country. The numerous important debates and trials which have been reported by him bear the best testimony to his accuracy and impartiality. To assist him, the services of several professional gentlemen have been offered; so that the public may rely on a fair discharge of every duty relative to the trial.

DELCHEUR & ARMSTRONG,

Boston, Nov. 22, 1806.

CAUTION.

THE public are requested to guard against the villainy of a particular Man who calls himself JOHN SNOWDEN—He professes the house carpenter and cabinet business, is of a middle stature, five feet 7 or 8 inches high, full featured, hoop shouldered, brown hair, and when conversing has a down look. He made his elopement from this place on the 7th inst. where he resided for several months back, cheating and committing frauds on his brother workman as well as on men of other occupation—and at last made choice of dark for light, to get clear of any charge, and escape punishment. It is uncertain what rout he has taken, but it is conjectured he is gone towards Fayetteville or Charleston.
