For Sale at the Wilmington Book Store;
The concentrated tincture of Yellow Bark,
 Prepared by J. DALTON, Chymist and Apothecary:
 A certain cure for intermittents, and very useful in all complaints that require large doses of the bark, and an excellent preventive against the prevailing Fever of the season, and the common Fevers which are so prevalent in the country—a tea-spoonful only of this Tincture being equal to a large dose of the Powder, or to six times its quantity of the Compound Tincture of the New-London Pharmacopœia. The great bitterness also gives it a peculiar advantage in Bilious Disorders, and renders it an excellent substitute for the Medicinal Bitters.
 J. DALTON adds the testimony of one of the most learned and eminent Physicians in the present day, Doctor Sims of London, President of the Medical Society, who says—that a concentrated preparation of the Yellow Bark, as a tonic and anti-nervous medicine, is superior to any; that it wonderfully promotes digestion, relieves lowness of spirits, tremors, and those complaints too frequently produced by the effects of inebriation, and of their irregular habits of life, and all those disorders arising from too great an irritability of the nervous system.
