${ }^{6}$ no Diftinction of Men or Nations; but I af-

- firm, that who, Alighting his own Poffeffions,
- covets another Man's, is accurfed to the
- Gods. Your Riches, O Romans! have
- fwell'd your Pride, and Pride has blinded you
- to your own Intereft: You call yourcdives
- Lords of the World, yet are you Slaves (and
- do not fee it) to your Avarice. Your Houfes
' are not fo crammed with rich Furniture, as
' your Hearts are filled with filthy Covetouf-
- nefs, which will in the End prove your De-
- Aruction; for who thirfts after Riches, is
- carelefs of Glory. A good Name frrings
- from brave and generous Actions, which is incompatible with Avarice ; and Fane loft,
- renders a Nation defpicable, and a Prey to
- others. Hear me, you Romans; and I be-
- feech the Gods ye may not only hear, but pro-
- fit: Ye condemn Adultery, yet are Strangers
- to Chaftity; and are lavifh in the Praife of
- Temperance, but live in the greateft Excefs
- of Luxury; ye cry up Patience as a Virtue,
- yet not a Man of you will put it in Practice;
- ye blame the Slothfol, and live in enervating
- Idlenefs; ye deteft Avarice, and ye are all
- Robbers; in a Word, Virtue has your
- Tongues, Vice your Hearts. This I fay
- not of the Romans in Illyria only, but even
- of you Senators, to whom I now addre!s my:
- feif. Your Motto on your Arms, Romano-
- rum ef debellare Superbos ©' parcore Subjectio,
- is ill chofen, and you would do well to fay,
- Romanorum ef Spoliare Innocentes Eo reddere
- Subjectos; for your Ambition is the Deftruc.
- tion of the Peaceable, and your Avarice
- makes you rob the Laborious. What Right
- had you Romans to our Lands which you
- have invaded, and of which you have por-
- fef'd yourfelves? What Injury from us could
- excite you to Revenge? Truly none; for
- we never heard of you till we lelt the Effects
- of your Tyranny; we heard your Name, and
- felt youtCruelty, at one and the fame Inftant.
- He who is rich, takes from and oppreffes the
- Poor; the Eye of the Covetous never can be
- fatisfy ${ }^{2} d$, neither will his Hand abflain from
- Rapine. Can I for this blame the Gods as
- carelefs Spectators? No, it muft be attribut
- ed to the Audacity of Man: The Gods are
- juift; and as by Violence ye have become
- Tyrants, fo by their Jutfice fhall je be made
- Slaves. Do not vainly in.agine, that it was
- your Bravery, your Cunduct or Difcipline
- that gave you the Vitiory over us Got mains:
- No, we are not in any of thefe Points your
- Inferiors; but we had offended the Gods,
- and you are the Inifrument of our Punifh' ment in their Hands. The Vices you found ' in Germanj, not the Arms you brought from - Rome, were the Caufe of our being conquer-- ed. What then, from our Example, ought - you to expect, who are no Way behind us - in your Wickednefs? And what Reafon have ' you to imagine that the juft Gods will be - partial in your Favour?" As this Part only regards my prefent Subject, I mall conclude this Paper with the Decree of the Senate in regard to this bold Peafant, which was, That his Speech fhould be entegifter'd, he himfelf made a Freeman and a Senator, and maintain'd out of the public Treafury.

DOMITIAN being taken off, to the inexpreffibic Joy of almoft all under the Roman Jurifdiction, from his Death the People began to refpire from that Load of complicated Mife. ries, under which they had fo long laboured, and a Succeffion of better Sovereigns enfued for a confiderable Time. Nerva was the firit that began the Reformation, an excellent Prince, whom Arrius Antonius could not help pitying, becaufe it was his Lot to take the Reins of Government among Men of fuch turbulent Spirits and vicious Morals. The Shortnefs of his Reign did not permit him to give fo many Proofs of his Power, as of his Good-will; for he died in about fixteen months after his attaining to the Imperial Dignity; but not without making excellent Provifion for the Happinefs of his Subjects, by adopting Trajan, and nominating him his Surceffor.

The extraordinary Virtues of. Trajan make fuch a glorious D-fcription in Hiftory, that the Authors feem to be at a Lofs for Words to ex. prefs their Admiration of his Valour, Conduct, Wifdom, Juftice, and Liberality. He enlarged the Roman Dominions beyond the Bounds reached by any of his Predeceffors, by the Acquifuion of AJjria, Arnenia, Mefopotàmia, and Arabia. From him the Parthians, and other Eaftern Nations, received their Kings, whofe Crow.as were held at Trajan's Pleafure, Nor was his Behaviour in Civil Govemnent, lefs admirable than his Succefs in War.
