Alphonee Heningburg, assistant to the president of North Caroline State College, made the most practical, electrifying dress of his entire career. It was the occasion of the annual "Education F o r Citisenship Campaign of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity with Phi Lambada and Beta Rho chapters act ing as sponsors.

Using the campaign selgan of 'A Voteless People Is A Hopeless People" as his thome, Prof. Heningburg began his discourse by giving historial beck ground of democracies. From ancient Greece to government as it is today, the speaker showed the advantages the democracies hold every other forms of government.

Rarly in his discourse Prof. Heningburg painted out why the fraternity switched from its campaign of former years which was "Go To High School, Go To Collegé." Said Prof. Heningburg, "The Negro youth seemingly had caught that vision so the fraternity proposed a campaign which would affect the race as a whole: Things CAN be obtained by proces use of the ballot?"

Although realizing that things could be obtained through voting, the speaker did not picture this as being an easy task; the Negro must taked those things. "A cow, does not give milk,"
