With census figures being announced, city boosters have to be careful about their estimates of population. By next year, however, they will be going strong and you will be surprised at the rapid growth of many cities.

JUDGE CALLAWAY ADDRESSES GROUP AT CHARLOTTE

E. C. Callaway, Republican candidate for the governorship of Florida, on Wednesday evening addressed a group of prominent Negro citizens in the auditorium of the Local YMCA. Beginning his speech with the saying: "The truth shall make you free" Mr. Callaway expounded most brilliantly upon the psychological and sociological trend and value of the Negro. "All of us want peace, decency, education, and agreement among ourselves, (White-Negro) is the necessity for obtaining these ends. Government is instituted among men and that institution so firmly constructed by former republicans democrat leaders now seem to be wavering."

Tactfully and brilliantly Mr. Callaway had this to say to the Negroes place and contribution in American life. "No race has ever in the history of the world, made the progress in the same length of time as has the American Negro since his emancipation. There are no more outstanding individuals in the world than, Dr. George Washington Carver, Roscoe Simmons, and many others. Together we (Negro-white) must travel up and unless we travel together there will be no real progress. There is an ever growing knowledge among the whites as to the injustices that the Negro has been subjected to and there are some of us, not all not even a majority, who have dedicated our lives to the correction of these injustices but the Negro must do his part; he must be willing to pay the price of freedom, he should never sell his vote, he must always be conscious of issues and not be swayed by barbecue and beer. These are prerequisites for obtaining equal status quo." In closing Mr. Callaway related some of his experiences with peonage in Columbia County, Miss.

Post Office Probe Cited By Morgan

Charlotte — Charging that Congressman A. L. Bulwinkle, Tenth District Representative, has maintained a "strange silence" for three months while Federal investigators have conducted a secret investigation of "bassism" in the Charlotte Post Office, Ernest M. Morgan, Republican candidate, in a statement here yesterday made a slashing attack on his Democratic opponent.

Mr. Morgan demanded that the Congressman clear his skirts of any taint issuing from this sensational condition. "And at the same time he desires to see that his loyal supporters are properly taken care of. Why does he continue to allow Mr. Younts to give Negro friends and supporters the run around complaints have been numerous among the Negro citizens, that they have been made promises that have never been fulfilled. Why is it that these promises have never been carried out? "Already three persons have been fired," said Mr. Morgan's statement. "Published, and undenied accounts of the serious situation have indicated that many friends of the Congressman have been questioned and that even Postmaster Paul Younts, Major Bulwinkle's 'man Friday' is under fire."

"Rumors galore have flooded the city," said Mr. Morgan. "These concern the sensational disclosure that have and will be made as to the extent of 'bassism' in the Charlotte Post Office headed by the president of the National Association of Postmasters."

"Yet Postmaster Younts as not said a word to defend his record, no has Major Bulwinkle, concerning the possibility that any of the campaign funds, which allegedly were collected from civil service employees, might have been used in conducting the campaign for his reelection."

"Congressman Bulwinkle surely knew of the development of power politics in the Charlotte postoffice," declared Morgan. "For years, now" the statement continued, "it has been common talk in political circles in Mecklenburg and elsewhere in the district, that 'the Younts machine rules the roost,' that you've got to get Paul Younts' okay before any matter can be handled through Major Bulwinkle's office, other than the mere routine, and that there was no chance to be elected to any office in the City of Charlotte without the aid of Boss Younts, whose aide, Sid Croft carried messages of political significance while drawing a pay check as a Civil Service employee."

"The whole postoffice mess needs an airing, and Major Bulwinkle, as the Tenth District Congressman, should be made available to his constituents the full facts, clear his own skirts of any possible taint, and clean out the trouble," declared Candidate Morgan. "Major Bulwinkle may not be involved under the Hatch Act or the Civil Service laws, but it is incumbent upon him to disavow the alleged acts of his campaign manager or the condition that developed under that manager's administration of the Charlotte postoffice."

"It should be cleared; the people do not like to see a monster machine set up in a county, with control emanating from the Postoffice and its operations financed in part by contributions culled from the pockets of Civil Service employees, many of whom paid because they feared a wry would be found to deprive them of their jobs."

"There can never be free elections, or untrammeled voting in this county, district or nation so long as a Congressman permits situations to develop in a post office in his district such as has allegedly—and the man on the street definitely—developed in the Charlotte office."

"I call upon Major Bulwinkle to take steps at once to clarify the situation."

Largest Peace-Time Appropriation Made At This Session

WASHINGTON — With the major business of this session disposed, of congress stands ready to adjourn, if it can on Oct. 1. A record for peacetime appropriations with a figure set at $15,000,000 marks this as one of the most "liberal" congresses in history.

Yet legislation against lynching, to outlaw the great American national crime, was not considered important enough to reach the floor of the United States senate, although there had been some sort of understanding or promise made whereby the anti-lynch bill, would get consideration during this session.

Passed by the house after the most harrowing debates and harrowing of witnesses and public hearings, the bill had the approval of the majority of the house members, excepting those from the Solid South, who saw in it an effort on the part of the northern members to use the bill as a vote getting football, and so expressed themselves on the floor.

But it was in the senate that the most difficulty was experienced, where some 30 members of that body were up for reelection and couldn't afford to have their opinions spread on the Congressional Record for public inspection. Their opposition to the bill was open and hostility to the measure expressed itself in recriminations and denials of state ments.

Declaring that the vote was on the emergency national defense, senators sought refuge behind the latter to kill any hopes of the former, despite the fine work which had been done

In getting various congressmen to support the measure. (So the bill goes over for another congress where the hope is the removal of an election year will give it a better chance to pass.)

Express Agency Adopts New Safety Program

A new and broader program for the prevention of accidents in the conduct of express service has been inaugurated by the Railway Express Agency, it was announced today by L. O. Head, president of the company. Some sixty thousand employees of the Agency in major cities and principal towns throughout the country will participate actively in the plan and select local safety committees to carry it forward.

"Our major objective is to make it difficult for employees to have accidents," said Mr. Head, "and we are using suggestions they offer, based on their long experience, in formulating the basic principles of our new safety movement."

In the collection and delivery of express shipments at principal centers of population, the Express Agency now uses more than 12,000 motor vehicles of various types, which is said to be the largest in the country, under one management. But because of the expedited character of the service, these trucks must operate in the most congested sections of the cities and towns at hours, when local street traffic is at its height.

Bug Chaser

Champion insect exterminator of Hollywood is lovely freckled Myrna Loy who insists on having an insectless garden. Having lived in apartments and rented houses all her life until a year ago, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star is now the overseer of her own six-acre ranch in Southern California. Five and one-half acres are planted to limes. House and gardens cover the other half here. In California, where insects multiply more swiftly than weeds and flowers grow equally fast, Miss Loy personally sees to it that insects do not invade her garden. Every morning, tourists on the sight-seeing buses which travel through Colavatore Canyon see a woman in a red dress, pulling around Myrna Loy's postbox, harrowing the soil and spraying insecticides. But it is not the gardener. It is Miss Loy, who trusts her flowers—her hobby—to no man.

Though purely a hobby, the star is proud of the fact that she recently sold her first crop of limes at what she called "a good price." This she says, is the "biggest kick" that has yet come to her as a "trancheiro."
