National Council of the Episcopal Church that the Bishop Tuttle Building, formerly used for training of women in Social Service and Religious Education, was now placed entirely in the hands of the college authorities.

To fill the unexpired term of the late Col. Joseph Hyde Pratt of Chapel, long a faithful member of the Board, the Trustees elected Rev. Robert J. Johnson, D. D., of Warrenton, N. C., a graduate of the college.

In spite of complaints received from a committee of students and from other sources, the Trustees voted their confidence in the administration of the college, and took steps to collaborate with it in endeavoring to bring about any, in able and practicable after careful study.

HOLDS CIO WAR RELIEF POST

Otha Kirk, comely office manager of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief's Detroit branch, who has won applause for her distinct efficiency. Truth of the matter is, at least a half-dozen union organizations in the Auto City would like to do some polite labor pirating to secure her services. Miss Kirk, a popular figure in labor circles, was educated in Detroit and worked previously with the Michigan Unemployment Commission. She confesses to a love for horseback riding.

ed the matter to the Supreme Court where it was decided that this procedure was equally unlawful. The opinion, however, pointed out that the Court did not pass upon the question as to whether or not it would be lawful for the Democratic party in convention assembled to decide on who should vote in the primary. At the next convention of the state party, a resolution was passed limiting membership to "white" Democrats. In 1935 a group of interested citizens in Houston, Texas, carried the third case to the Supreme Court (Grovey vs Townsend). In that case the United States Supreme Court held that

PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL GO TO WAR

The public schools of Washington, D. C., like those in most other sections of the country, have revised their curricula to fit their pupils for fuller participation in the war effort. Shown above are some of the activities of pupils in the Nation's capital. At top, left, three pupils demonstrate types of fighter planes constructed in the model airplane class. At top, center, a young woman at Phelps Vocational High School learns the intricacies of an airplane motor. Free play activities as well as courses in child care and training are provided at the Margaret Murray Washington Vocational School in its preschool guidance classes shown at top right. Bottom, left to right: Homemaking and the preservation of foods are important in the war effort. A student at the Margaret Murray Washington Vocational School is shown blanching carrots to lessen skin for removal. At Armstrong High School, the pupils are taught to make jewelry and other articles from scrap metal from the Art Crafts Class. The young women are shown with an exhibit of their work. The schools' facilities are not confined to delivery of instruction. Also trained for war industries. The trainee shown at the right is learning to operate a lathe in a machine shop at Phelps Vocational School.
