First, that however chaotic the world condition may be, God has matched the youth of this generation with this very hour. Secondly, the institution challenges the student to grow and to be fruitful, to lay hold of a purpose as well as an objective for life, to be the answer rather than to find the answer which face us.

HAMPTON, Va. — Declaring that war jobs for women will not last forever, Doctor Charlotte Hawkins Brown of Palmer Memorial Institute urged Negro women to prepare themselves primarily for careers in homemaking in an address at the Women's Senate induction ceremonies at Hampton Institute last Wednesday.

The ceremonies, held in Ogden Hall, included the presentation of officials of the Women's Senate and the induction of freshmen into the organization, in a candlelight service conducted by Dr. Flemmie P. Kittrell, dean of women. Miss Barbara Glenn of Annapolis, Md., president of the senate, presided.

Asserting that a happy marriage and the experience of intelligent motherhood should be the highest aim of every woman, regardless of race, creed, or color, Dr. Brown stressed her conviction that Negro women should not deceive themselves and expect to hold big jobs in industry after the war.

She said:

— Whites Have Capital —

"You will still be living in a world that is largely white. The Negro is only slowly emerging from economic slavery."

"In spite of our 'Hold Your Job' campaign, the important jobs will go to the men of both race. And since a larger part of capital belongs to the white group, it is perfectly natural that a large part of the jobs will go to whites. Negro women's jobs in many cases will go to white men."

—Need Intelligent Mothers—
"What the Negro needs most is a large number of well-trained boys and girls. There is a need for intelligent Negro mothers, training their children to be honest, truthful, industrious, and cultured."

"Only about one million American men were soldiers in World War I, but there are about eight times that many in World War II."

—Moral Rearmament—

"They will come back war-torn, disillusioned, needing love and the comforts of a happy home to bring them back to normalcy. They will need the care and understanding of women of higher character."
