SIDELIGHTS OF THE LIFE OF DR. DUDLEY

Dr. Dudley later to become a college president was born a slave, but both in his parents and upbringing he was singularly fortunate. His father, John Bishop Dudley, a skilled and highly regarded carpenter, and his uneducated but ambitious mother, Annie Hutch Dudley, were owned by Governor Edward Dudley 1789-1855, one of the most famous and progressive of North Carolina governors; and through him "Jimmy Dudley and his parents received advantages not usual to the colored people of that day.

As soon as he was prepared to enter, he went to Shaw University in Raleigh. There, we learn, he was often in hot water because of his mischievous pranks, for along with his serious ambitions he had a sense of humor — and it never deserted him. His professors all liked him and spoke highly of his work.

As his first venture in educational activities, young Dudley took the state examination which was required in order to get a teacher's certificate. In 1880 at the age of 20 one he received his certificate to teach the first grade in Sampson County.

His work was so convincing that the following year, without making application for position, Dudley was elected principal of the Peabody School in Wilmington. Here he labored for fifteen years. Not only did he pay close attention to his school, but he was also active in religious, social, civic, economic, and political affairs. He found time to edit for a while the Wilmington Chronicle, a weekly newspaper. Through this paper and his parents he received advantages not usual to the colored people of that day.

As soon as he prepared to enter, he went to Shaw University in Raleigh.

Through the Wilmington Chronicle and the Perpetual Building and Loan Association, which he organized, he encouraged thrift, economy, and enterprise among his people. His activities in social and fraternal organizations acquainted him not only with the affairs of North Carolina and New Hanover County but also with national and foreign affairs. For twenty years he was foreign correspondent for the Grand Lodge of Masons.

"The legislature of 1895 appointed Professor Dudley a member of the Board of Trustees of A and T College. When the Board met in May of the same year in its annual meeting he was elected its secretary. The following year in May, 1896 it became necessary to elect another president of the College on account of the resignation of Professor J. O. Crosby, its first president."

Dr. Dudley's final undertaking at A and T College was his struggle to obtain a half million dollars for new equipment and buildings, in order that the college might be able to function more efficiently. At that time he was not very strong, and it is believed that the extra exertion hastened his death. Suffering from a severe headache he went home to rest one Thursday afternoon during his sixty-sixth year. He remained at home on Friday and attended to college business in his room. But on Saturday he became worse and then passed away on the night of April 4, 1925.

Out of respect for him classes were suspended at A and T College. Funeral services were held on Tuesday in Murphy Hall. Friends of both races paid tribute to him, as his body for the last time under the college arch on the way to the train, taps were sounded. At St. Stephens Church in Wilmington another funeral service was held; and his burial in the Pine Forest Cemetery of that City was conducted with the full Masonic ceremony.
