

Above is shown the architect's idea of a proposed meeting house for the Durham Monthly Meeting of Friends to be erected in Durham on Alexander Avenue between east and west campuses of Duke University. The Durham Quakers have already launched a campaign for funds to erect the one-story building which is expected to cost $20,000. According to Mrs. Susan Gower Smith, spokesman for the group, a contribution for the project has recently been received from former President Herbert Hoover. Among the sponsors of the building project are Durham's Mayor E. J. Evans, Mrs. Mary Trent, Mayor-Pro Tem, Dr. J. Neal Hughley of North Carolina College and Dr. Waldo Beach of Duke University.

Connolly (5) in the two sets than all of the combined games of Miss Connolly's opponents in the previous rounds, SPORTSBEAT believes that Miss Gibson was far away from her maximum effort, and conceivably could have upset the champion. The answer is found in the three control factors—coaching, competition, attitude.

The contributing factors to the turn of events in the match—foot-faults, the grass courts, the high wind, Miss Connolly's fine steady game, etc.—are directly related to the aforementioned control factors. Miss Gibson has not had the coaching which is demanded of championship play nor has she devoted concentrated hours to the many phases of the game which must be mastered by the champion, nor has she played consistently in the top competition which facilitates adjustments to playing conditions and improved attitude. Bud Palmer, one of the TV commentators, stated that "if Miss Gibson was not so erratic and was more consistent she would be the world's best." With this we agree. Now that she has completed her undergraduate training maybe she can give the long hours to practice that the game demands. Don Budge, former World's champion and TV commentator during the match, said that "Miss Gibson plays the only type game which can defeat Miss Connolly, that is, a powerful service which will permit assuming offensive position at the net."

FOOT FAULTS DAMAGING

Now look at the record—Miss Gibson served 12 double faults and committed five foot faults. She had her service broken through (lost it) 8 times in the two sets. We believe the unprecedented number of double faults and foot faults were due to the effects of the psychological barrier of the second foot fault call and the high wind. Play could have been adjusted to both. There can be few, if any, gifts in championship play, and a champion must have the temperament to correct her own faults before she can take advantage of the faults or weaknesses of opponents.

SPORTSBEAT certainly hopes that Miss Gibson will have the time to give to her tennis while she is working at Lincoln University (Mo.). Certainly sorry that our efforts to get her to accept the position at Prairie View were fruitless. The officials there had assured us that she could continue her development in tennis.

The very best of luck to Miss Althea Gibson in her quest for national honors.

The assurance of the Lord Jesus Christ is our only hope, the retiring president concluded.

-Court-

The big obstacle to the possibility of Byrnes' appointment to the court seems to be the feeling that Eisenhower, who many have come to believe as having learned the art of playing the game of politics "to the hilt," feels that he has sufficiently rewarded the one-time Supreme Court justice for his work on his behalf last November by appointing him to the United States' UN delegation. Some were openly relieved in the feeling that Byrnes' "pay-off," coming before Vinson's death, would preclude him from consideration for the high court.

Appointment of Judge Parker to the high court would not necessarily alter whatever position the court decided to adopt on the school segregation case. Judge Parker has already sat in judgement on the original case, as one member of a three judge panel which heard the Clarendon County, South Carolina case, and the custom in this situation would be for him, if appointed, to abstain from participating in a ruling. Chief speculation for the vacancy, however, has centered on two Republican stalwarts, New York's Governor Thomas Dewey and Governor Earl Warren of California.

Gov. Warren may have an advantage over Dewey because he would be the first far western states representative on the bench. The western most state now represented on the court is Indiana, home of Justice Sherman Minton. In addition, it is not certain that Dewey has given up his presidential aspirations and that he would be amenable to a court appointment.

On the other hand, observers have pointed out that John Foster Dulles, who has proved an unpopular secretary of state, may be given the nod for the vacancy and that Dewey may be moved in as secretary. Such a maneuver would not conflict with Dewey's political ambitions.

Appointment of either would come as cold comfort to pro-segregationists, since both have openly taken strong equal rights stands.

The names of Judge William H. Hastie and Thurgood Marshall have also been mentioned in connection with the vacancy. It is reported that some Eisenhower advisers have declared that if he makes this history-making step, the Republic Party could be assured of solid Negro support for years to come.

Hastie has had a successful career in public office and Marshall has experienced outstanding success as a civil rights lawyer.

It is believed that whoever is appointed to fill the vacancy will soon be shifted to Chief Justice. It appears certain that a Republican will be named for the vacancy and no one expects Eisenhower to miss this opportunity of making a Republican Chief Justice.

Pittman Stadium in Fayetteville will be the scene of a baseball game Friday night between Fayetteville and Durham Shriners. A 1953 Studebaker will be given away during the contest as a special feature of the event. Shown above are some Durham Shriners standing around the automobile which will be given away. Kindah Temple (Fayetteville) Potentate Thurman Smith revealed that among his collection of players will be Gus Gaines, William Davis, Harold Scott and McKinley Hubbard, among others. Playing for the Durham team will be W. A. Grandy, Lathrop Alston, Alexander Barnes, Carl Roach and J. I. Wheeler.

In such an event, Justice Hugo Black, senior member of the court, will probably be appointed temporary Chief Justice. And as soon as the October term of the court is over, the new appointee will probably take over as Chief Justice. The present court now contains only two southerners, Black, of Alabama, and Justice Tom Clark, of Texas.
