Miss Sallie Hughes, 1955 NCC Graduate, Marries Amos Thornton

Amos Thornton, all-American halfback on North Carolina College's 1953 and 1954 CIAA championship football teams, was married in Norfolk, Va. earlier this month to Miss Sallie Mae Hughes, former sweetheart of the University of Illinois' famed J. C. Caroline.

Miss Hughes, a 1955 graduate in commerce of NCC, gained national prominence in 1952 when she was photographed by national magazines at Illinois where she was Caroline's guest at Homecoming celebrations. Again, in 1953, Miss Hughes made the news when Caroline came to Durham and spent the better part of a spring vacation on the campus at North Carolina College in Durham. She, Caroline, Thornton, and the Eagles' other all-American halfback ace, Jerome Evans, were frequently photographed for the picture services then.

Early in 1955 there were rumors that Miss Hughes and Thornton, who were constantly seen together on the NCC campus, were "serious". After Commencement at NCC when Miss Hughes received her degree, the rumors increased. In mid-July, the event happened.

Two times all-America and three times all-CIAA, the speedy Thornton was unanimously acclaimed one of the CIAA's all-time great backs. He's known to have offers to play in the Canadian League, and it's reliably reported the Baltimore Colts are hot after him.

The report will be denied at NCC but Thornton is also wanted back at the Eagles' nest to help with backfield chores. He has one more quarter's academic work to be done, and he may return to NCC.

Miss Hughes, who is known as "Butch" to her friends, is a strikingly attractive young woman who often wears a closely cropped hair style that gives her a Leslie-Caron appearance. She is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Hughes, 1013 Webster St., Washington, D. C. She formerly resided in Columbia, S. C., where she and Caroline were friends in high school. She is working in Washington at this time.

Thornton is a native of Norfolk, Virginia, and a graduate of Booker T. Washington High School there. His father, Thomas Galt, lives 943 Galt St., Norfolk.

University of Illinois' J. C. Caroline are Jerome Evans, the other part of NCC's one two punch, left, and Caroline, right. Thornton, like Evans and Caroline, is a halfback sensation likely to perform in a Canadian league or likely to return to NCC to complete his academic work and to assist with backfield chores.

Thornton has one more quarter's academic work to be done, and he may return to NCC.

Model Homes Development

GLEN ARDEN, MD.

320 Model Negro homes which are being built here as a development worth 3 1/2 million dollars, have also got a shopping center as the Prince Georges County Commissioners approved the zoning. A school too, has been set aside for the community. The shopping center won't be built until the homes are finished.

Each of the homes will cost about $10,000 to build and will start January 15th. The town of Glen Arden has already discussed plans for annexing the $3.5 million dollar investment when it's finished.
