March 30 in conference with Hill and John S. Battle, Jr., attorney for the City of Charlottesville.
The NAACP view, Wilkins asserted, "has been (and remains) that law suits should be the last resort and should be employed only when localities and states present such resistance and defiance as to leave citizens who seek their constitutional rights no alternative."
All that Negro citizens seek for their children, Wilkins said, is "that equality in educational opportunity" afforded by "a public school system that is not organized or administered on the basis of race. They seek this objective peaceably but firmly. They realize fully that a great social transition is in being and that this change requires not only patience, but honesty and fairness as well."

The buildings within the next 12 months and pay off the indebtedness on the home, within the next five years, was presented by the president. The budget was enthusiastically received and adopted, with many of the representatives of Unions announcing immediate plans to comply with the program.

REGISTERED

to form precinct 11.
All three are located in the heart of the heart of the heaviest populated Negro sections.
William Jay Walker, chairman of precinct 12, told the TIMES this week that only 290 of the eligible voters in that precinct had registered by Wednesday.

It is estimated that approximately 400 had registered by Wednesday in precinct 11 and 300 in precinct 10.

Before the change, the combined registration of the Whitted and Pearson school precincts totalled approximately 5,500.

One of the reasons for the change, as stated by the Elections Board officials, was to reduce the delay in voting at Whitted and Pearson precincts by cutting down the size of the two districts.

Only two more weeks remain for registration before the city elections. The books will be open at the polling places in each precinct all day Saturday, April 11, and April 13.

During the week, prospective voters may register at the homes or other places designated by the registrars.

The North Carolina State Highway Patrol was judged the nation's No. 1 law enforcement organization both in 1956 and 1957 by the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

HAMPTON

trustees will take up the matter of his resignation in an April 24 meeting at the school.

Several months ago, the administration announced a change in the academic program at Hampton. The change resulted in a shift in emphasis which drastically curtailed courses in the trade division.

Moran reportedly explained the change by pointing out that the number of registrations for the trade division had fallen off greatly in the past few years, and the division's facilities were becoming obsolete.

However, reports say complaints from trades division graduates over the change have been growing in intensity during the past several months.

Moran's offer to resign was interpreted as forcing a showdown over the issue.

Henderson, a member of the board for the past four years, explained that the board sets the policies in all of the school's major areas, including academics. The president's job, he said, is to execute the policy.

He said that the board had participated in the trades division de-emphasis. However, Henderson noted that there had been a question in the minds of some as to whether President Moran had been executing the board policy in regards to the trades division de-emphasis.

Moran was inaugurated at Hampton in 1949. At 40 then, he was considered one of the country's youngest college presidents. Prior to his election, had chaired an interim faculty administration committee which acted following the resignation of President Ralph Bridgman.

ALUMNI

Among high ranking alumni and college officials expected to attend the meeting are Hugh V. Brown of Goldsboro, president of the national alumni association, and J. J. Henderson, member of the Hampton board of trustees. Both will be heard in brief addresses to the meeting.

The convention's major address will be delivered at Sunday's final session by J. W. Goodloe, vice president and secretary of North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company. He will be introduced by A. E. Spears, president of the Durham chapter.

The general theme of this year's meeting is "Preparation for Living in A Complex World."

L. C. Rogers of Enfield, president of the regional association, will preside over all sessions of the meeting.

Other key regional alumni officials to take part in the two day proceedings are Melvin Johnson vice-president of the Northeastern district; Chauncey Stokes, Jr.

president of the Coastal Plains chapter; Miss Ruth Ferdinand, president of the Goldsboro chapter.

Genevieve Young says:

Beauty is Your Privilege!

by GENEVIEVE YOUNG

Nothing detracts so much from a woman's beauty as her own apology for her appearance. You run into a friend on the street and stop to chat . . . without paying too much attention to her appearance. However, the moment she starts making excuses for "looking so terrible"—you notice that she does look a bit bedraggled!

You tell a woman how pretty she looks—your compliment is immediately spoiled if she starts complaining how tired she is, or how her feet hurt, etc.

It is disconcerting to talk to a woman who is constantly smoothing her hair, primping, or tugging at her clothes. Even though her apology for her looks is unspoken—it is there in those nervous, jerky, uneasy gestures.

None of us look our best at all times or can always be perfectly dressed for every occasion. Usually this does not distract too greatly from our appearance—unless we start making excuses and calling attention to our selves.

Miss Dorothea Towles, internationally famous negro model, fashion and beauty expert directs this beauty column under the pen name Genevieve Young.

It is important for you to remember that good grooming, a touch of perfume, and the proper use of cosmetics surrounds you with an aura of beauty which dress alone cannot provide. Remember always "Beauty Is Your Privilege."

Miss Young will answer your letters on "Beauty Problems." Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and send to Miss Genevieve Young, R. C. Beauty Institute, P. O. Box 2841, Memphis 3, Tenn.
