state's official party greeting the Toure entourage at the Raleigh Durham Airport. The Elders were also among Governor Hodges' dinner guests.

At North Carolina College Mr. Toure said the African continent has "suffered greatly and long."

"These sufferings," he said "accumulated over the years and have now converted themselves into moral and spiritual values which will help to transcend and to make a better world." Mr. Toure said man's technical achievements have exceeded his progress in moral and spiritual values.

The Guinea chief of state reiterated frequently during his N. C. stay his countryman's appreciation of the expressions of friendship tendered them by their North Carolina hosts.

"The longer our friendship continues," Mr. Toure said, "the more confident we are of the need for direct contact among the various people of the world." He observed that modern communication and transportation have brought the nations of the world closer in a world community. One of the real factors uniting man is "human charity" according to Mr. Toure. "And it is with a very high conception of his role that man should ever look with a deep humility in general.

"No where will he feel a stranger because everywhere he goes he will feel only one responsibility, that of doing what he can to promote peace and friendship. The difference which divides us now is the lack of mutual understanding. Men will want, then, whatever it may be that life demands and power shall die but the people shall live on. It is only through the progress of these people by helping them along their way that the individual human being has a future across the sea.

"In coming here we find our atmosphere. And we have come with all simplicity and interest in the American people. But our great desire is to consolidate the foundation for cooperation between two countries."

In addition to NCC President and Mrs. Elder, others attending Governor Hodges' dinner for Mr. Toure Wednesday night were Chancellor and Mrs. W. B. Aycock of the University of North Carolina; Chancellor and Mrs. John T. Caldwell of North Carolina State College in Raleigh; Robert Giles, Hodges' administrative assistant and Mrs. Giles; Vice President and Mrs. Paul M. Gross of Duke University in Durham and Vice Mayor and Mrs. Gene Stroud of Chapel Hill.

Others attending were Mayor and Mrs. E. J. Evans of Durham; V. J. Kennedy, board chairman of N. C. Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Mrs. Kennedy; Dr. John Larkins of the State Welfare Department and Mrs. Larkins; J. H. Wheeler, president of Mechanics and Farmers Bank and Mrs. Wheeler of Durham; A. T. Spaulding of N. C. Mutual Life Insurance Co. and Mrs. Spaulding of Durham; Dr. and Mrs. Jerrold Orne of the University of North Carolina; Prof. and Mrs. George Daniel of the University of North Carolina; and Dr. and Mrs. Neal Dow of Duke University.

and other mementoes from students at NCC for the students of Guinea.

"These gifts may disappear," Toure said. "But the spirit of friendship that prompted them will live long with us. It is this spirit that we shall take back to Guinea."

Dr. A. T. Spaulding, Mutual president, presided at the insurance company's program.

Mrs. Spaulding, speaking in French, presented a corsage to Mrs. Toure.

In speaking to his audience at the insurance company, Toure said, "We have only one philosophy, the philosophy of man."

"We want for our country no grandeur other than the grandeur one finds in the human sphere."

"We realize we must go beyond Africa for technical advancement, but as for human values, we don't need to leave Africa."

"Our message, and the message of all men of color, asks all humanity to join in the building of foundations of fraternity and charity among all people. Our desire is to see the success of the human achievement written in solidarity, fraternity, and charity."

Dr. John H. Morrow, former chairman of NCC's department of foreign languages and now U. S. Ambassador to Guinea, accompanied the Toure entourage.

Security police and highway patrolmen had to twice rescue him from students during his tour of the NCC campus. In addition, he was given a 30 second ovation following receipt of the doctor's degree in NCC's Duke auditorium and another 45 second ovation following his acceptance address.

to comment.

During the examination, Terrell reportedly excused himself to go home to procure some information which the auditors requested.

He was found in his bathroom with a granddaughter who lives with the family, according to Detective H. W. Cox.

Police were not notified of the incident until several hours later, after Terrell had been taken to the hospital and was undergoing surgery.

He was not taken through the emergency room but straight to the operating room, police said. Dr. H. Rembert Malloy, Terrell's surgeon, said late Tuesday after a four hour operation that he was "past the critical stage if he desire to make it."

Bridges came to the institution Monday after two members of his staff, Howard Nipper and John Buchanan, turned up the discrepancies in the regular audit of the college books last week.

"I decided to come here and talk to Terrell," Bridges said.

Terrell has been business manager of the school for the past 12 years. He came to Winston-Salem from a similar post in Topeka, Kansas. A native of Kentucky, he is a graduate of Hampton Institute and studied business administration at the University of Pittsburgh.

Taylor pointed out that the fact that Patch talked to Bryant, Sr., and the club shouldn't be held against his son the defendant, whom officers admitted didn't know of the business Patch testified to. The Lawyer contended that Bryant, Jr., a graduate of N. C. College, as an officer of the private club, had no control over what persons in the club discussed and more than one's guest in his home when the conversation is unknown.

"They could have been talking about sending machine guns, to the Cubans rebels so far as Bryant, Jr., knew, but he shouldn't be charged with it," the defense attorney argued.

"Two of them pioneered in vocational education aimed at the masses. One was devoted to liberal arts, directed more nearly at the classes. Each of them was working for a common cause—the improvement of the status of the Negro."

In the course of his remarks Barnett said "complete school desegregation is a certainty which I believe deep in their hearts all southerners know will eventually come.

Before the election, Pitts held the job of chairman of the Convention's Executive Committee.

The election was held on Wednesday night, taking many newsmen by surprise. They had been earlier told that the election was scheduled for a Thursday morning session.

Approximately 200 delegates attended the 92nd session of the convention held at the Union Baptist Church.

Aside from the election, another highlight of the meeting was the keynote address, delivered by Dr. T. J. Jemison, of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, on Wednesday afternoon. Jemison is recording secretary of the national convention.

Suit

NAACP leaders were recently threatened with jail sentences for sitting in the waiting room.

Marshall, who is director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., said the case against the airport authorities originated on November 7, 1958, when a Negro air force public relations man, Richard Henry, was not permitted to sit in the white waiting room at the Greenville airport while waiting for a flight to Detroit.

Henry was returning to headquarters after having covered an extensive air force maneuver near Greenville.

In mid-September of this year District Judge George Bell Timmerman ruled against Henry. The case then appeared to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals on September 24 by NAACP Legal Defense Fund attorneys. It is now awaiting hearing.

Marshall, in reply to questions regarding possible legal action that might be taken by Jackie Robinson, revealed that the issues in the Henry case are essentially the same as in Robinson's situation.

S. C. CORE To March on Airport

GREENVILLE—S. C. — "Greenville, South Carolina CORE will march on the Airport in protest against the Jim Crow policy," according to the Reverend J. S. Hall, chairman of Greenville CORE.

"We plan to mobilize hundreds of Negroes in the Greenville area," said Hall. Reverend Hall, his wife, and Glover Current of the NAACP, accompanied Jackie Robinson to the Greenville Airport on Sunday, October 25 when they were threatened with jail for taking seats in the white waiting room.

National CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) has assigned field secretary James T. McCain to assist the Greenville group in planning the Airport March. In the last year CORE members have worked to end racial discrimination in airports in Columbia and Charleston, South Carolina and in Atlanta, Ga.

Program Climaxes "United States" Rally at Rocky Mount Church

ROCKY MOUNT — Durham editor-publisher Louis E. Austin, prominent Methodist layman and nationally-known civil rights advocate, was guest speaker for the Baptist laymen of the St. James Baptist Church, Rev. Wm. L. Mason, minister, Sunday night.

The program climaxed a day-long Men's Day program by the men of the church which saw a total of $963 raised from what was called a "United States rally". Topping the list of state "governors" was Deacon Jarvis Nelson who was "elected" president by virtue of having raised the highest amount - $852. Henry Brown won the vice president's post with $63. William Weaver won the secretary of state's position with $51; and J. T. Bailey won the attorney-generalship with $50.

Editor Austin discussed briefly three topics which his audience agreed would go a long way in reshaping the destiny of all Americans, particularly those of the colored race. Austin urged Negroes to "Rediscover Old Frontiers" wherein job opportunities of a half-century ago have been lost to the race group through default and lack cooperation at a time when colored people had a virtual monopoly on them.

This, he said, can be remedied thru increased training for the crafts so as to reclaim some of these frontiers. Austin has been a frequent advocate of deemphasizing the channelling of students into the teaching profession which is greatly overcrowded.

As did God of Moses when stymied in the wilderness, Austin asked his audience: "What is that
