Judges Asked To Hear Again Contempt Case

NEW ORLEANS, La.—All seven judges of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals have been asked to rehear the appeal of Carl Braden from a one-year sentence for Contempt of Congress. Braden's lawyers told the court that his imprisonment would open the way for state legislative committees to destroy any organization working for racial integration in the South.

Advance Noted In League's Annual Report

WINSTON-SALEM — A total of 29 new job opportunities for Negroes were developed here last year through the activities of the Urban League in cooperation with commission, S. D. Harvey, Executive Director of the local League, said last week.

The local report, a year-end audit of activities in race relations in the community, was released in connection with the local Urban League's thumbnail sketch of activities during 1959.

Harvey said that the local League is continuing to emphasize new job vistas for Negroes.

"The mere fact that we have opened 29 job opportunities here-tofore closed to Negroes is considered tangible progress in the area of industrial expansion of our community and willingness of some employers to accept the training and skills of all citizens who knock at their employment doors.

"It is regrettable that we still have some employers who are reluctant to employ technicians who are available and willing to work," Harvey also hit "failures in vocational guidance" of Negro students, saying some are guided away from their aptitudes "because of no chances in those fields." Counselors and others directly responsible for guiding students are being urged to guide students into those fields where their abilities lie, he said. "This would open up all jobs."

According to the report, the Urban League carried out the following activities during 1959:

1. Served as consultants to three schools during Career Week observances.
2. Sponsored Ebony Magazine Fashion Fair.
3. Secured employment for six students during summer on science project.
4. Gave three students scholarship assistance.
5. Screened applicants for scholarship aid.
6. Established a Tomorrow's Scientists and Technicians' Scholarship fund.
7. Conferred with management on hiring practices with incoming and expanding industries.
8. Encouraged management to employ record number of Negro youth during Christmas season.
9. Held conferences in behalf of Urban Renewal.

Special attention will be given in 1960 to under-employment of Negroes. If employment based on merit can be made to prevail, some of the problems of juvenile delinquency, crime and sickness would decrease, Harvey said. He further stated that under-employment patterns destroy initiative, self-respect, and dignity among Negroes, and among others it creates hatred, suspicion, bitterness and frustration.

In all of our operations we will continue to utilize interracial committees and the teamwork approach, which is designed to create a better climate of racial justice and understanding, Mr. Harvey said.

The Winston-Salem Urban League, one of sixty-four affiliates of the National Urban League and a member of the United Fund of Winston-Salem and Forsyth County, is a professionally staffed social agency working to benefit the total community by improving the conditions under which Negroes live and work and by creating a better climate of intergroup understandings.

Children have tuberculosis, too. Here, Dr. Emily M. Morley examines one of 45 children presently being treated for TB at N. C. Sanatorium at McCain. The children range in age from one to thirteen and come from all sections of the state. Most of them have active childhood (primary) TB, and the average hospital stay is 10-12 months.

When treatment is started in time and carried out adequately the more serious forms of TB, such as tuberculous meningitis, can be prevented. Adults from 27 counties are also treated at N. C. Sanatorium, and the hospital authorities point out that the Children's Building would soon be empty if there were no adults at home with TB.

Major Provisions of State's New Wage Law Explained by Crane

RALEIGH — State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane today issued a summary of the chief provisions of North Carolina's new Minimum Wage Law, which goes into effect on New Year's Day.

Crane called attention to the following provisions of the law:

1. Starting Jan. 1, 1960, all employers of six or more covered workers must pay each covered worker wages of not less than 75 cents an hour for all hours worked.
2. An "employer," as defined in the statute, means "any individual partnership, association, corporation, business trust, or any person or groups of persons acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee."
3. Coverage under the law is spelled out on an employer basis, not an establishment basis. If an employer has as many as six non-exempt employees, they are covered even though they may work in different places throughout the State.
4. The unit of time employed for determining coverage is the Any time the employer has as many as six non-exempt workers on his payroll, all six are covered by the law for that pay period.
5. Enforcement of the law is the responsibility of the Department of Labor. The Commissioner or his inspector may inspect payroll records and may require from any covered employer a full and correct statement, in writing, of the wages, hours, names and addresses of his employees.
6. Covered employers are required to keep posted in their places of business, in a conspicuous and accessible place, a summary of the Minimum Wage Law and any applicable wage orders or regulations.
7. Penalties for violation include a fine of not less than $10.00 or more than $50.00, or imprisonment for not more than 30 days, in the discretion of the court. After an employer has been notified by the Commissioner or his inspector that he is violating the law, each pay period during which the violation continues constitutes a separate, indictable offense.
8. Employees may sue individually for collection of unpaid wages plus six per cent interest, in any court of competent jurisdiction. In addition to any back wages or other judgment awarded to the employee, the court must require the defendant to pay court costs and reasonable attorney's fees incurred by the employee.

Large Part of N. C.'s TB Work Goes for Germ-Infected Children

RALEIGH — You may not hear much about it, but children have tuberculosis, too. There are forty-five being treated for TB at the North Carolina Sanatorium at McCain where the N. C. Sanatorium System has special facilities for children. They range in ages from one to thirteen and come from all sections of the state.

Most of the children are admitted to the hospital because they have active childhood (primary) TB, according to Dr. Emily M. Morley, physician in charge of Long Building where the children stay. Generally, they look healthy, feel good, and have few, if any, symptoms of disease, but do have a positive reaction to tuberculin and X-ray evidence of TB.

A few, unfortunately, do have the more serious forms of TB such as tuberculous meningitis and military TB which were 100 per cent fatal until about a decade ago when antituberculosis drugs became available. Though most of these serious cases can be cured now, the side effects which sometimes accompany them can not.

Bearing mute testimony to this are two babies, now in Long Building, one of whom is blind, and the other, almost blind and mentally retarded as a result of "brain damage" caused by tuberculous meningitis which attacks the central nervous system.

Fortunately, however, practically all of these serious consequences can be prevented if treatment is started in time and carried out adequately.

Treatment for active childhood TB consists of drug therapy, including at least two kinds of medicine (more in the seriously ill patients), a nutritious diet, and good general care. Since most of the children exhibit the same energy of a normal child, their daily activities must be carefully planned, to guard against over-fatigue and over-heating and to assure adequate rest; and supervised, in order that their mental and physical development may continue normally.

Another service which has a direct bearing in the prevention of TB in children is the treatment of adults with TB at the N. C. Sanatorium System's four hospitals located at McCain, Wilson, Black Mountain, and Chapel Hill. If there were no adults with TB at home, the hospital authorities pointed out, the children's building would soon be empty.

The problem of childhood TB, however, can not be solved by the hospital alone. The eternal vigilance of the private physician and health department in looking for active TB among adults and children and close follow-up of all contacts is necessary.
