year old CORE official Jim Peck was charged with interfering with a police officer when he protested the arrest of Thomas.
Enroute to Birmingham, the bus stopped at the station in Aniston, a town 60 miles away. There a mob armed with stones, clubs and knives was waiting for the group.
The mob attacked the bus, breaking out windows. Finally, the bus pulled off but a flat tire forced it to stop just outside of town.

When the bus stopped for repairs, the mob surrounded the bus and began smashing more windows. Finally an incendiary bomb was tossed inside setting the bus on fire and forcing the passengers outside. Three of the group had to be taken to a hospital and treated for smoke inhalation.

The interior of the bus was completely destroyed by the fire. Although three state troopers were at the scene, no arrests were made.

Shortly afterwards, the CORE team pulled in at the Birmingham bus station was attacked by a group of hoodlums.

Peck and several Negro members of the group sustained severe beatings at the hands of whites who mobbed them. Several were hospitalized. Several stitches were required to close a scalp wound suffered by Peck. It was at this point that the group sought protection from Gov. Patterson, who advised them to leave the state immediately.

were hospitalized for treatment as a result of the beatings. The interior of the bus was completely destroyed by the fire.

The American Jewish Congress raised the possibility of the violation of a federal law in connection with the violence.

In a message to Attorney General Kennedy urging swift action in the incident, the AJC cited a federal law enacted in 1956 which it suggests may have been violated by the white mobs.

It called the attacks on the "Freedom Riders" "disgraceful." The American Civil Liberties Union called the "swift action by the federal government" to punish instigators of the violence in a message of the Attorney General.

"While recognizing the responsibility for law enforcement rests in the hands of local authorities," the ACLU statement urged Kennedy to "strongly denounce the attack, to make publicly clear as the nation's chief law-enforcement officer that the federal government expects local officials to prevent such attacks."

Progressive Mothers Club

The Progressive Mothers Club met Thursday, May 11, at the home of Mrs. Lucille Flintall on Cecil Street.

The president, Mrs. Helen Brewer, presided over the business session, after which the hostess served a delicious repast.

Present were Mesdames Hattie Sutt, Ruth McCollum, Margie Harrington, Helen Daniels, Irene Burt, and Frances Walker. The club was happy to welcome a new Browne, chairman of the education department at North Carolina College, and the Rev. Mrs. Mary Wimberey Gant, director of guidance for the Oxford city schools.

Dr. Browne will speak at an 11 o'clock morning program, and the Rev. Mrs. Gant will be heard in the evening at seven.

The two-part women's day program at the church is being sponsored by the women's day committee of the church. It is headed by Mrs. Leonora Murchison and the Rev. Lucy James.

The Sunday morning speaker, Dr. Browne, is a native of Boston, Mass. and received all of her formal education in New England. She took the A.B. degree at the University of Rhode Island, the Master's at Rhode Island College, and the Ed.D. degree at Harvard. Rhode Island College subsequently conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Education on her.

Prior to joining the NCC faculty, she taught at Virginia State, West Virginia State and Bluefield State Colleges. She has contributed to scholarly journals and holds memberships in a dozen professional organizations.

the remainder of the Committee's endorsement received the usual overwhelming support in all of the Negro precincts.

The Committee endorsed, besides Atkins, Dean, Alford, Steel and Carlton in the contested races. The most widely held opinion was that the Negro voters regarded both candidates as equally satisfactory, and that the Committee did not fully present its case for Atkins.

The new building was scheduled to get its final inspection by state school authorities on Friday. It will open in September. Consolidation of the three Negro high schools is part of an overall movement in the county aimed at reducing the number of high schools from 13 to four. Already one consolidated project has been completed. Alamance Central was the second.
