Heir To "Daddy Grace's" Title Comes To Durham

vice in Durham during a visit Saturday. "Madam" Clara McCollough, his wife, is seated at right. Two of the four girls used to fan the Bishop and his

Youth are Race Relations Best Hope—Mrs. Bates

Mrs. Daisy Bates, heroine of the 1957 Little Rock school integration struggle, sketched a gloomy picture of race relations in this country, but pointed to the emergence of militant youth as a bright spot in the picture. Speaking in Durham on Sunday before an audience celebrating the eighth anniversary of the Supreme Court's ruling on school segregation, Mrs. Bates said: "Today, five years after Little Rock and eight years after the Supreme Court decision, we are still facing a sick and confused world." The woman who personally faced violence and danger in Little Rock for several months during the fall of 1957 and the winter of 1958, admitted that she had been discouraged over the pace of progress in race relations. "But I've been most encouraged by the large army of young freedom fighters in this country," she declared. Mrs. Bates, who was catapulted from an obscure post as president of the Little Rock NAACP unit to becoming one of the most widely known women in America after her leadership in the 1957 school integration struggle in that city, addressed over 300 persons attending a meeting at Fisher Memorial Tabernacle on Piedmont Ave. Several of the city's civic, business and religious leaders took part in the celebration of the anniversary of the Court's ruling. Pointing out that America has become a symbol of freedom to enslaved and downtrodden people in many lands, throughout the world, Mrs. Bates proceeded to measure the extent of

McCollough Trying to Blend His Image With Late Cult Leader

Bishop Walter McCollough, of Washington, D. C., heir of the late "Daddy Grace" paid a flying visit to one of the movement's churches in Durham Saturday on the last leg of a triumphal tour of the southern area of the "Daddy Grace" empire. McCollough arrived in a motorcade of three cars, including his personal, chauffeur driven air-conditioned Cadillac limousine, waved to followers gathered outside the church, located at Roxboro and Proctor Streets, preached for several minutes, then drove away. Approximately 200 of the faithful turned out to greet the new leader.

McCollough, who had only recently emerged victorious in a federal court battle over the rightful successor to "Daddy Grace," had just come from Greensboro, on the northern leg of his tour of the southern churches. The tour was launched to celebrate his court triumph as leader of the religious movement.

The Durham stop was part of the trip which had carried from Washington, D. C. to Savannah, Ga. and back. On the way, the McCollough entourage stopped to visit "Daddy Grace" churches at Norfolk, Va., Greensboro, Charlotte, Columbia, S. C., Savannah, Ga., Augusta, Ga., Spartanburg, S. C., Gastonia, Concord, Salisbury and Durham. Included in his entourage was his wife, "Madam" Clara McCollough, the "Sons of Grace," his private secretary, Miss Delores Beal, eight female singers, and his three sons, Charles, 21, James, 17, and Walter Jr. Charles severed as his chauffeur. The new leader of the "Daddy Grace" movement appears to be striving to merge himself in the minds of the followers with the image of the late Bishop C. M. "Daddy" Grace.

Many of the old "Daddy Grace" rituals are kept in the conduct of the church services. Bishop McCollough's remarks to the flock here Saturday were punctuated at each climax by a blaring, brass ensemble, a feature characteristic of the "Daddy Grace" services. He dresses similarly to the late "Daddy Grace," and wears long curls on the back of his head and long, curved sideburns. Four young girls dressed in white were placed on the rostrum to fan McCollough and his wife, who sat just off to the right of the rostrum, during the en-

Action Starts In Savannah; Loop Has Asheville

SAVANNAH, Ga. (Special) Twenty thousand leaflets blanketed torrid Savannah, Ga. on Sunday morning as the first step in an all out boycott against the Savannah White Sox, the pace-setting 9 in the South Atlantic (Sally) League. The boycott was called as a "last resort" to end unfair and discriminatory practices against Negroes perpetrated by the Savannah club. W. W. Law, president of the Savannah Branch and the Georgia State Conference of Branches, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), stated at the initiation of the boycott that "Negro support on the play field and in the segregated bleachers has been the life-saving factor for the Savannah team and the Sally League at large. We have tried to negotiate a peaceful solution to this unfair treatment situation but the door has been slammed in our faces. We have no other recourse than to ask Negroes to stay out of Grayson Stadium (the home of the Savannah White Sox) until such time as they are treated like human beings."

Selective Buying Campaign Pays Off In Charleston

CHARLESTON, S. C. — The NAACP spearheaded selective buying drive here has resulted in the hiring of Negro sales personnel by at least seven downtown merchants. Employment of Negro cashiers and clerks by these stores was called "the biggest breakthrough of Negroes into white-collar jobs in the city, and probably in the state," by Charles Wickenburg writing in The Charlotte (N. C.) Observer. The NAACP drive, under leadership of J. Arthur Brown, state conference president and Rev. B. J. Glover, local branch president, has been under way for seven weeks. The Charlotte Observer, a major southern daily, reported that the NAACP campaign, "is the first sustained Negro effort to desegregate employment, and has had more success than the sporadic lunch-counter 'sit-ins' in the past two years." Daily newspapers here have been ignoring the NAACP drive to secure employment and equal treatment of Negroes by the local merchants. Brown explained that pic-
