Resentment Mounting Against Fuller Products President Arrests Follow Danville Demonstration Renewal

No Violence Reported As Sit-ins Resumed

DANVILLE, Va. — Anti-segregation demonstrations resumed in this southeastern textile and tobacco center this week as more than 25 young Negroes staged sit-ins at four restaurants and three theaters in one of the first civil rights actions in the nation since President Kennedy's assassination Nov. 22.

Nine of the demonstrators were arrested, five at a restaurant and four at a theatre. At the other scenes of the sit-ins, the demonstrators left when requested to do so.

Five of the nine arrested were juveniles. The annual amount of violence initiated by the Danville police in other demonstrations earlier this year was not present as the group, most of them ranging in age from 15 to 25, met at a restaurant in Danville, Va.

Boycott of Cosmetics Firm Being Talked Among Top Leaders

By JACKIE ROBINSON
(For VIP News Service)

NEW YORK — Top leaders of four of the nation's most powerful civil rights organizations, in exclusive statements to me today, told their reaction to statements reportedly expressed in this city by a Negro business executive who blames the lack of race progress on the Negro's "lack of initiative, courage, integrity, loyalty and wisdom."

The possibility of a nationwide, massive boycott by Negroes in retaliation for views expressed by Chicago cosmetics manufacturer, S. B. Fuller was introduced in my discussions with a number of individuals, both prominent and relatively unknown.

RESENTMENT GROWS

Resentment against Mr. Fuller has stemmed from newspaper reports of a speech he delivered before the 68th Annual Congress of American Industry, sponsored by The National Association of Manufacturers at the Waldorf last Friday.

The Chicago business man was quoted as stating: "You can not legislate a law that's going to get rid of prejudice" and asserting that "the Negro thinks that there is a racial barrier which keeps him from making progress. Therefore, he asks for legislation to remove the barrier which he automatically created himself, due to the lack of action on his own behalf."

I discussed Mr. Fuller's remarks and a similar line of thinking credited to him recently in an interview in U. S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT with the See BOYCOTT, 2A

Two Map Plans For Civil-Human Rights Struggle

WASHINGTON, D. C. — President Lyndon B. Johnson and James Farmer, National Director of CORE met in Washington in an effort to clarify and make plans for the successful implementation of the struggle for civil and human rights in America. In their discussion, Farmer made a historic proposal in regard to "completing the revolution" in the vast area of education.

Farmer, emphasizing the need to continue the struggle on every possible level in the area of direct action, proposed that the Federal Government subsidize a massive program of remedial education throughout the nation in which students who have suffered from sub-standard and discriminatory school systems, be given extra years of high-load remedial teaching to "undo 300 years of damage that have made schools in some parts of our nation wholly inadequate."

Farmer said that "wringing freedom is not enough... even if we end outright discrimination quickly, there is a backlog of inadequate schools, teachers and curricula that must be dealt with and dealt with now in order to complete the revolution."

Turning to the specifics of the plan, Farmer estimated that close to 1,000,000 primary and secondary school students are in need of this kind of program immediately. The program, as envisioned by the CORE leader, would use existing plants, recruiting teachers especially trained in remedial work, salaried by the government and teaching students, both white and Negro, in the North as well as the South.

Farmer suggested three major sources of teachers for the program: one, those recruited from See SESSION 2A

Activities will begin with registration at 8:30 Saturday morning. Starting at 9 o'clock, and continuing through the Sunday morning sessions, directors will form the fifth "All-Directors Band" and will read through all of the compositions in the State Festival list.
