

OLDER AMERICANS
Let Leisure Be Your Guide

Julius Verne would have hated jet travel. He knew that the world should be toured at a leisurely pace.

Rome, as they say, was not built in a day. So one should take at least several days to see it. The lure and love of Heidelberg is food for several evenings' thought. Pause long enough in Pompeii to trace the ancient wagon ruts that have marked the earth for centuries. Look long at Pisa's leaning tower—you will not see its like again. Don't count the minutes in Cologne. Let the perfume of the city waft you leisurely on your way. Never merely peek at panorama.

Understandably, of course, too few tourists have the time to see Europe as it should be seen. But for older, possibly retired folk like those seen viewing the Castle San Angelo from Hadrian's Bridge, the American Association of Retired Persons and National Retired Teachers Association has organized 72 tours which cater to people over 55 years of age. A sample of these tours is the AARP/NRTA Grand Circle

Tour which runs from 50 to 56 days and visits England, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Monaco and France. In line with the leisurely pace, the group sails from New York instead of flying.

These tours, specially designed for mature travelers, stress sensibly-paced sightseeing, stops at hotels accessible to a city's points of interest, ample good food, amiable companionship, and time to rest. Mr. Verne himself didn't ask for more.

Further details on the tours may be obtained from the AARP/NRTA Travel Service, 555 Madison Avenue, New York, New York. All tourists who refuse to rush through Rome, hurry through The Hague, zoom through Zurich, or nod at Nice, take heed.

National Council of Churches
Gets Grant from Presbyterians

NEW YORK—A $60,000 grant to the National Council of Churches has been approved by the United Presbyterian Church's Commission on Religion and Race. The money is to be used in the NCC's race work, and is the largest denominational contribution to that fund.

The United Presbyterian Commission unanimously approved the grant in the final session Wednesday of a two-day meeting at the Statler Hilton here.

"We regard the work of the NCC Commission on Religion and Race as a vital part of the overall racial struggle, and are firmly convinced this grant, together with our participation in NCC action projects, will help to get the job done," said Dr. Gayraud S. Wilmore, Jr., executive director of the Presbyterian agency.

The money is to come from the Commission's regular 1965 budget, which totals $321,952. In addition, the Presbyterian Commission is involved in a wide range of racial undertakings through the Fund for Freedom, which will be received in many United Presbyterian churches next Sunday.

Other grants approved by the Commission in this week's meeting totaled nearly $30,000, including $5,000 for legal representation of civil rights workers; $5,000 for the Crossroads Africa program; $10,000 for a program of team visitations to determine conformity of United Presbyterian racial practices to national church policy; and lesser amounts for a variety of undertakings ranging from voter registration projects to help in the construction of community centers and aid for a Negro seminary students to specialize in broadcasting-film field.

The visitation program will send Commission and staff members to the presbyteries of Milwaukee, Logansport, Baltimore, Detroit, Brazos and Trinity (Texas), Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Cincinnati, and the synod of the Mid-South, between now and early June. The teams will make intensive surveys of existing race practices and later will offer recommendations to church officials in those areas on ways that improvements can be brought about.

The Commission also approved a project whereby white and Negro pastors would work in each others' churches for at least a month at a time in a ministers' exchange program.

Adopted a statement calling for termination of large-scale Mexican farm labor importation and urging the development of community projects to maintain a stable supply of farm labor.

Accepted a report urging integrated faculties, social organizations and governing boards in United Presbyterian colleges and universities.

And accepted tentative plans for assimilation of the Commission's work in the general program of the church after the Commission goes out of operation at the end of 1966.

COMMUNICATIONS

Our largest liner, "United States," is 990 feet long, and is manned by more than 900 people. Orders are relayed over a complex system of telephones and electronic circuits... the wires of which are housed in galvanized, rigid steel conduit—rust-proof, reliable, long lasting.

The railroad's newest method to speed car handling are automatic classification yards. In a typical yard, a single operator through a central remote control tower—shunts cars to one of 20 or 30 tracks. Making sure all switches and car retarders "get the message" is another important job for rigid steel conduit.

The vital services that make today's skyscrapers efficient and habitable rely on galvanized steel conduit to carry and protect electrical inter-office communications and telephone lines that weave their way through the building. Steel pipe is also used for central heating and air conditioning.
