Saint Paul's Grid Star Inks Giant Contract

LAWRENCEVILLE, Va. strapping four-year football star at Saint Paul's College here Cornelius Allen Barrett, has just signed a contract to play professional football with the New York Giants. Three other pro teams exhibited a strong interest in the 22-year old sen-

Barrett signed in the coaches office of the college's new gymnasium as his princiapl mentor Head Coach Robert Smith and Athletic Director Joseph E. Thompson beamed approval

The six foot, three inch, 241ound athlete from Roanoke Va., is a three-year varsity golf letterman as well as having been a football starter for SPC as center or defensive end, beginning in his freshman year

Barrett, a quiet, modest felow who is also a leader in extra-curricula activities, had only this brief comment at the signing: "I'm happy to get this opportunity. Rest assured that I will give it a real whirl be-ginning with the summer training camp and will put out my best to earn a regular spot in the Giants' lineup."

Thompson and Smith both believe that the youth has a real chance to become a standout with the Giants. "He's as good now as Rosie Grier (Giant lineman) was at the same stage in his football career," said Smith emphatically.

Army Finds Ailing Pros Too Costly

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Athletes such as Joe Namath and Charley Taylor will stay out of the armed forces be-cause the government can't afford them.

The Army, in testimony made public recently, said one major reason that professional athletes with physical defects were deferred from duty was to spare the government the cost of paying injury claims for years to come.

NAMATH of the New York NAMATH of the New York Jets and Taylor of the Wdsh-ington Redskins were reject-ed because of physical disa-bilities and the Army has been under fire from civilian groups who wonder why these young athletes can participate in rugged sports and still not be fit for military duty.

This same question was put to Army witnesses at a reapproved appropriations subcommittee and in its testimony the Army cited a report by the Surgeon General's office on one unnamed "well-known football player."

THE REPORT said his case was reviewed by several of the most prominent orthopedic consultants in the country, who concurred with the Army decision to reject the player.
