Durham Teachers on Tour

The NEA Convention at Miami Beach, Florida was attended by these enthusiastic Durhamites: Miss Mary L. Stephens, Mrs. Manie T. Geer, Miss Ruby Grissom, Mrs. Virginia Bivens, N. A. Cheek, Mrs. Nannie Greene, Mrs. Lydia L. Parker, Mrs. Madge Turner, Miss Virginia Rogers, Miss Mable Watson and Mrs. Mable Mabry.

Enroute, the group, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Collins, visited many spots of interest: the Fountain of Youth, St. Augustine, Fla., Cypress Gardens, Orlanda, Fla. and Silver Springs, Fla.

They also went to Nassau, Bahamas, by Mackey Airlines, where they visited the Ardstra Gardens to see the parading flamingoes, who were well disciplined in military command. The stately birds obeyed orders like soldiers.

A glass-bottomed boatride showed plants and animals on the bottom of the ocean. A tour of Nassau by car, and also horse and carriage, gave the Durhamites lasting experiences.

WHAT MAKES A GOOD MANAGER?

"A MANAGER'S JOB," says Richard Handl, General Manager of the Rama Hilton in Bangkok, "is to secure the very best performance possible from his people."

What is the keystone of successful management? Executives everywhere agree that it is the ability to handle people.

These tips from six managers of an internationally famous hotel chain will help you to impart your know-how to others more effectively . . . make people want to do the things they ought to do . . . and criticize without creating ill will or crippling initiative.

"Don't be stingy with compliments," advises Olaf Bonde, General Manager of the Cavalieri Hilton in Rome. "Pat a fellow on the back when he deserves it; the man who is immune to the power of the sincere compliment has yet to be born."

"If you want to treat people as individuals, then get to know them as individuals," says M. Roushdy Abouseada, General Manager of the Nile Hilton in Cairo. "Get acquainted; talk with them; be observant. Let them know you; be yourself—and in turn, they will be themselves."

Richard Handl, General Manager of the Rama Hilton in Bangkok, Thailand, notes that a manager's job is to secure the very best performance possible from his people. "You must arouse the desire to do a job well. If you can find out what a man wants and show him how he can get it by doing something
