Greensboro Teacher Joins NTC Program

GREENSBORO — Mrs. Mildred B. Payton of Greensboro has been accepted into the National Teacher Corps, a program to teach children whose educational growth has been stunted by poverty.

The U. S. Commissioner of Education, Harold Howe, II, made the announcement this week.

As a teacher with experience with disadvantaged children, Mrs. Payton is enrolled in a pre-service program conducted by one of 44 colleges and universities across the country currently training 1600 corpsmen. This fall Mrs. Payton will supervise a team of college graduates in a local school of a low-income area.

Mrs. Payton is a graduate of A and T. College and received a Bachelor of Laws degree from N. C. College at Durham. For the past 2 years she has been teaching in Turkey as a Peace Corps volunteer.

The corpsmen are studying the problems of the culturally deprived child and are receiving special instruction in methods and materials suited to teaching these children. In addition to their work in the schools, intern-teachers will be earning a Master's Degree from a nearby university.

The ghetto schools and the isolated schools of the rural poor now bear the brunt of the acute teacher shortage. The purpose of the National Teacher Corps is to encourage college graduates to prepare for careers teaching disadvantaged children.

The National Teacher Corps program was established by the Congress as part of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

Stop worrying about suffering through those cold spots and hot blasts next winter.

Switch to electric comfort heating now.

It responds quickly, smoothly without hot blasts. Then it spreads gentle, even warmth throughout the room. Into every corner. That's the wonderful feeling you get with flameless electric comfort heating.

Although Duke Power neither sells nor installs the equipment, we'll gladly furnish the facts. Get them soon. Why suffer?
