No Arrests In Nash County Cross Burning

No arrest was made in last Saturday night’s fire at the Cross Burning, which is located at the intersection of West Main Street and 1st Avenue. The fire was reported at approximately 10:30 p.m. and was put out by Nash County Sheriff’s Deputies.

The fire, which started in the cross beam of the structure, caused extensive damage to the building. The cause of the fire is under investigation by the Nash County Sheriff’s Department.

The cross burning was the third in the county in the last month, with fires occurring in Tarboro and Wilson. All three fires were put out by local authorities.

A community meeting is scheduled to be held tonight at 7 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Rocky Mount to discuss the issue of cross burnings.

The meeting is open to the public and will be attended by representatives from local government, law enforcement, and community organizations.

The meeting will also feature a discussion on ways to prevent future cross burnings and promote peace and understanding in the community.

The Cross Burning is a historic landmark in Nash County and has been the site of many community events over the years.

The meeting is sponsored by the Nash County Commission and the Rocky Mount Area Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting is free and open to the public. No reservations are required.
