(New York)—Raymond Rubin, attorney for Mrs. Esther James, is interviewed by the press after he met with the attorney for a record company handling Adam Clayton Powell's album "Keep The Faith, Baby". The record company offered $50,000 to settle Mrs. James' libel suit against Powell but Rubin told them to come back with another $124,000. Rubin said he told the lawyer "I might knock $1,000 off the price if Powell would publicly apologize to Mrs. James and the court."

Are You Feeding Your Dog Properly?

Before determining the correct amount of food for your dog it is important to make sure the food you give him represents a well-rounded meal that will meet all his energy and growth requirements. Contrary to popular belief, if you simply feed him as much as he wants or whatever he happens to like, the chances are that it will affect his health in an adverse way.

For example, dogs usually like table scraps but too much of the type of foods eaten by humans do not necessarily comprise a balanced diet for dogs.

According to Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, a major supplier of tin-plated steel used for canned dog food and other canned products, a balanced diet for dogs will include carbohydrates (vegetable matter), minerals, vitamins, proteins and fat. J&L advises that you look for these ingredients in the dog food you buy.

Having established the nutritional value of the food you are giving your dog, you can then decide how much you ought to be feeding him. This depends on a number of variables. Very active dogs obviously need more food than older dogs who tend to spend most of their time sleeping. Growing puppies need more food for their size than adult dogs, whose needs tend to remain fairly constant.

A dog weighing 15 pounds will require one can of food per day, assuming the food contains at least 450 calories. This basic proportion can be adapted to dogs of various sizes. For example, an active, medium-sized cocker spaniel weighing 30 pounds will require two cans of dog food a day.

Jones & Laughlin reminds dog owners of the importance of water to maintain a dog's minimum requirements. But a supply of fresh water should be available at all times in a convenient place.

Medicare Plus Private Health Insurance

Women in the know—especially those with senior citizens in the family—are aware that an important addition to the Medicare program takes effect in January. Included under Medicare's Part A and already being paid for by Medicare enrollees, this new program part helps pay for an elderly patient's nursing home care. To qualify, a person must enter a qualified nursing home not more than 14 days following a three day hospital stay. Medicare does not cover ordinary custodial care of the elderly.

The combined benefits of Medicare's Parts A and B, costing individuals just $6 a month, are very important to people over 65 and their younger relatives. Your Medicare Handbook (available at local Social Security offices) proves this indisputably. However, there are certain program gaps to be looked at realistically.

Let's see what medical services are not covered by either Part A or B. (1) Routine physical check-ups. (2) Private duty nursing. (3) Self-administered prescription drugs. (4) Hearing aids, glasses, routine dental care, dentures. Also, there are certain deductibles which the patient must pay as well as limits set on hospital and nursing home days and amounts per day paid for by Medicare. These, too, are fully explained in the Medicare Handbook.

Medicare, incidentally, does not cover anyone traveling outside the United States. Private health insurance can fill in many gaps. A Traveler's agent can help you dovetail Medicare benefits and group insurance benefits with Traveler's health insurance policies, so that the good care of our much-loved older generation can be guaranteed.

Gastonia Credit Union Plans New Building

By MAUDE M. JEFFERS

GASTONIA—Excelsior Credit Union of Gaston County held the 24th Annual Shareholder's meeting January 26 at Highland Elementary School and voted to expand the present facility. The expansion program will include using the entire first floor for office space for the Credit Union, and purchasing three adjacent lots on the east side for drive-in windows and parking space for customer off-street parking. The members also voted a 1/4 percent dividend.

The year 1966 also saw Excelsior Credit Union, according to Nathaniel Barber, Secretary, Treasurer and the credit and auditing committee, grow by more than $135,000 — from $832,816.94 to $967,865.08 and its guaranty fund to $53,315.92 up from $44,920.70. The undivided profits rose some $13,000 last year $63,893.05 in 1966 over $50,129.80 in 1965.

The members voted to set the goal of one million by Apr. 29. This is the 25th or silver anniversary of the founding of the Excelsior Credit Union. A large and enthusiastic audience present also voted to observe the anniversary in a public program to be planned by a committee working with the secretary, the president, J. Q. Falls and the Board of Directors.

President Falls presided over the meeting and announced the long term future building and expansion plans of the facility. His recommendations coming from Mr. Barber and the Board were accepted. Dr. C. W. Floyd made many helpful statements concerning the importance of the expansion and stated because of the crowded conditions in that area the Credit Union and others involved suffered a loss.

Mr. Barber in his annual report verified by the credit and auditing committee, stated that this past year has been the best in Excelsior's history. The earnings were larger than ever.

The Christmas Savings Club he said topped all previous years and dividends totaling $28,645.78 were declared, raising the total paid out from 1945 through 1966 to $232,895.

Special praise was extended to the office staff for its efficiency and loyalty to the organization. Praise was extended to the Board of Directors, auditing and credit committee for their faithfulness.

Principal R. C. Gingles of Pleasant Ridge School was added to the Board of Directors for two years. Re-elected were W. B. Brooks, Henry Adams, Jr., Plato Smith, C. R. Hamilton and Dr. N. A. Smith. Credit Committee are J. Lucio Saunders, Edward Odum and Samuel Russell, Sr. Auditing Committee are J. R. Robinson, G. N. Brooks and Mrs. Hazeline Brandon.

chooses to forget) that the NAACP Board meeting on May 9, 1955, the Board voted to maintain its position as stated at the February meeting, despite a letter signed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. (Mrs. Agnes Meyer, named by him as a participant in this move, is not now and never has been a member of the NAACP Board.)

The white members of the Board present in May voted to let stand the February resolution supporting the Powell amendment; they did not vote "solidly" against Powell as he has charged repeatedly.

Item: But while the NAACP was giving 100 percent support to that amendment, Mr. Powell does not want the public to remember that he, Adam Clayton Powell, ran out on his own amendment in 1961.

Not only did he run out on it and refuse to introduce it, but he promised to "take the floor and fight against" any such amendment if any other Congressman proposed one.

One Congressman, Peter Frelinghuysen (R., N.J.), did propose such an amendment to HR 7300 in 1961 and Mr. Powell opposed it in committee, thus helping to kill the amendment before it reached the floor.

The Congressional Quarterly Almanac for the 87th Congress, First Session, 1961, records on page 223 that Congressman Powell, as chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, led within the committee the opposition to Representative Frelinghuysen's amendment which would have denied Federal funds to states which discriminate. The amendment was killed by a vote of 16-13.

In an April 13, 1961, dispatch from Washington, the Associated Press reported that Congressman Powell "... promised today to withhold his anti-segregation amendment from pending school aid legislation.

"He said that if anyone else offered an anti-segregation amendment — and some Congress members have indicated they will — he would lead the opposition to it."

So, the record shows that the Congressman's big to-do about the NAACP Board of Directors fighting the Powell amendment is not true.

And the record also shows that he did run out on his own amendment and that he did oppose a similar amendment proposed by another Congressman."

When one further considers the above, it is easy for the average supporter of the NAACP to become confused, frustrated or even suspicious about the "hovey dovey" situation that presently exists between the NAACP and Powell. Who knows how long it will last or but what on tomorrow the NAACP may again draw the sword on Powell, as it did back in 1963 in its pamphlet entitled: "Adam Where Art Thou?"

Cassius Clay Donates $10,000 to College Fund

NEW YORK — Muhammad champion, this week contributed $10,000 to the United Negro College Fund.

The 25-year-old fighter's gift will be used to help support 33 predominantly Negro colleges and universities affiliated with the Fund.

In presenting the contribution, Muhammad Ali expressed the view that education is a cornerstone in the struggle for freedom, justice and equality.

"Although I myself never had the opportunity to go to college," he said, "I give to the United Negro College Fund this $10,000 out of my love, admiration and respect for their 34,000 dedicated students to help in some small way so that the seeds of immortality hidden within each one of them may be nourished and developed to their fullest capacity. To me, they are all the 'greatest!'"

Muhammad Ali was educated in Louisville, Ky. and graduated from high school in 1960. As long as he remains World Heavyweight Champion, he says he will continue to do everything possible to aid the Fund and its member institutions.

During the past two decades, the United Negro College Fund has raised more than $95 million to assist its 33 member institutions. Contributions to the organization's annual appeal — conducted in 250 communities — are used by the schools to expand educational programs, bolster scholarship and other financial aid to nearly 19,000 students, strengthen facilities and build library holdings.

The number of people in a community is not nearly as important as the type of people in the community.

Outlook For 1967
A dramatic upturn in the market is not likely in 1967. But perhaps more than in any year in history, selectivity, I believe, will be one of the most important criteria for successful investment.
In my opinion, therefore, these are the seven industries in which companies appear to offer the more attractive investment opportunities.
AIR LINES - Eastern, Delta, Northwest, and TWA are among those carriers with more promising long range potential.
DRUGS: Merck, Eli Lilly, Upjohn, and Smith Kline & French in the ethical segment; Bristol-Myers, American Home Products and the Warner-Lambert among the more broadly diversified companies; and Johnson & Johnson, Becton-Dickinson and Baxter Laboratories in the area of disposable hospital supplies.
ELECTRONICS: Texas Instruments, first choice for prospective long term growth in the semi-conductor field, with Fairchild Camera and Motorola warranting consideration on a more speculative basis; Foxboro, first choice in the process control field, with Honeywell meriting consideration in this area as well as in the computer field; Zenith, RCA, and Motorola in color television; and Hewlett-Packard, first choice in electronic instrumentation, with Beckman, Bausch & Lomb, Perkin-Elmer, and Tektronix

WHAT'S NEW... SKIDS AND SAFETY

4000 years ago, Babylonian banks gave customers a "bonus" for their patronage—usually a glass or two of temple beer.

One well-known American chewing gum began as a premium to sell baking soda. The gum was so popular it became the company's main product.

Today, cigarette coupons, such as offered by Alpine and Galaxy are gaining in popularity. Over 20,000 gifts are redeemed each month with coupons from these brands. Gifts include linen, china, tableware, furniture and even color TV sets. These brands also sponsor a popular group savings program for clubs and organizations.

With the call of the slopes sending more and more people to their sports equipment stores to load up on skiing supplies, the Metal Tube Packaging Council offers some tips on what else to take along.

Many who take to the hills for the very first time make the mistake of forgetting suntan lotion. A day between sun and snow can really fry a face, especially with windburn adding its bit to the blush. Be sure to take a good suntan lotion if you want your trip to be rosy... but not red!

You'll find that lotion in a metal tube is your most convenient skin friend. It packs neatly, compactly, and safely — it doesn't break. And you can control, with a squeeze, the exact amount you want to use.

You'll also want to be sure to take a first aid kit — not that every ski lodge doesn't have a handy corps of bone-setters—but you never know when you'll need some soothing salve or ointment, a bandage or an antiseptic preparation. (You never know... but you might as well expect it.) Again, those metal tubes will really save the day—especially if you're trying to fix one hand with the other.

From ski wax to toothpaste, metal tubes cover a multitude of ski needs. So when answering the call to the Great Outdoors, pack your suitcase and the pockets of your parka with the vital supplies that will make your trip an all-around success. Then, bend, balance, pole off, and let easy do it.

England observed this phenomenon in skidding hazards at airports over a decade ago and began grooving the runways. U.S. efforts are just getting underway. Cross-ribbing of runways will give more stopping traction at such airports as National in Washington, D.C. and Kennedy International in New York.

NASA research designed a grooving machine to make roads safer. The February issue of Popular Science Magazine tells what can be done in your State to prevent uncontrollable skids. The magazine offers NASA's advice on what you can do yourself to avoid skidding.
