Co-ed Week End Planned at N. Carolina College Mar. 10

Women legislators from two states will be featured speakers in North Carolina College's 18th annual Coed Weekend, Friday through Sunday, March 10, 11 and 12.

Theme of the weekend will be "The College Woman's Responsibility in Participation and Leadership in Government, National and Local."

In addition to the symposium featuring Mrs. Grace Hamilton, of the Georgia House of Representatives, Mrs. Victorine Q. Adams and Mrs. Lena K. Lee, both of the Maryland House of Delegates, the weekend will include a coffee and conversation hour, two charm clinics, a piano recital, and the presentation of awards to outstanding undergraduate women.

The weekend's program will begin at 3 p.m. Friday, when Mrs. DeVera Edwards, consumer service coordinator for Pharmaco, Inc., of Kenilworth, N. J., will conduct a charm clinic at the women's gymnasium.

The coffee and conversation hours, at 8 p.m. Friday, will feature speakers in the student union building. Miss Jean M. Capers, attorney of Cleveland, Ohio; in the education building auditorium, Miss Ruth Harvey, attorney of Danville, Va.; and in the science building auditorium Dr. Helen Edmonds, dean of NCC's graduate and a member of the college's interim committee.

The symposium, at 10:30 Saturday morning in B. N. Duke Auditorium will feature Mrs. Hamilton, representing 137th District, Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Lee.

Another charm clinic will be conducted at B. N. Duke Auditorium at 2 p.m. by Miss Sadie Washington and Miss Mary Harris, of the NCC Home Economics Department, and Miss Christine Satterwhite, instructor at Durham's DeShazo Beauty School.

A 5:30 p.m. reception Saturday will honor special guests at the college's new 400-student residence hall.

Miss Patricia Rush will be presented in her senior piano recital at 5 p.m. Sunday in B. N. Duke Auditorium.

The annual coed supper, at 7:30 Sunday evening in the R. L. McDougald Gymnasium, will feature the citation of outstanding women. Columbus Smith, of Jacksonville, Fla., will be a soloist at this event.

Garden Time

A good many requests have been received for information about fruit trees which require less space than standard sorts.

Fortunately, we do have a rather good collection of varieties grafted on dwarfing rootstocks which are very desirable for planting around the home where space is a problem.

First the apples: Varieties are available on Malling no. 9 rootstock. This is the most dwarfing type, the trees reaching a height of from 6 to 10 feet at maturity. They bear early, sometimes at the end of the second growing season, if well attended.

They should be planted in good soil and staked for support until they are well established in the soil. They may also be supported by a wire trellis, a wall or lattice support—Espalier training. These varieties are satisfactory: Yellow Transparent, Golden, Delicious and Richard Delicious (or Winesap or Stayman Winesap). It is important to remember that I am giving fruitful combinations and varieties which I know are available on Malling 9 rootstock. Both Winesap and Stayman are self- and cross-unfruitful so Golden Delicious is necessary as a source of viable and compatible pollen to fertilize the blossoms of Winesap and Stayman.

Second, the peach: The dwarf type peach varieties are self-fruitful and, when mature, about 8 feet tall. This makes for easy pruning and spraying as well space conservation.

We have a good selection of varieties, too. Here they are with flesh color in parenthesis: Ely-Red Fre (white). If you do not object to white flesh, it is one of the early sorts; Hale Haven (yellow); and the old favorites, Elberta, Georgia Belle (white) is also available and has, for years, been a favorite variety of people in Piedmont North Carolina.

Third, the pear: I am only recommending two dwarf type pear varieties, both of which are resistant to fire blight. Moon-glow is early, attractive and the flavor is rated as good. Magness is one of the newer blight resistant varieties of good quality and aromatic. It is self-unfruitful so must be planted with another variety for pollination. Moon-glow is compatible and will give a fruitful combination. If you wish to try some of these dwarf types, let me know and I will put you in touch with a source of supply.

At EXPO 67—New York Execs Jet in Style to Canada's Big Expo '67

MONTREAL (CFN)—A group of executives from New York recently flew into Montreal, Canada as guests of the Canadian Government, the Advertising and Sales Executives Club of Montreal and the officials of Expo '67—the big world's fair due to open next spring.

The New York group—from the 4,000-strong Sales Executive Club of New York—made the flight in a sleek, luxurious Jet Commander.

Expo '67 is still in the construction stage but the sprawling site will be ready for visitors from around the world by April, 1967. The members of the New York Sales Executives Club were invited to tour the exposition in order to see the vast enterprise before it reached the final stages of completion. Palmer, a widely-known sports broadcast and TV figure and one-time star of the New York Knicks basketball team, said his visit to the huge fair will be followed by a tour of the site by Mayor Lindsay.

New York Commissioner of Public Events Bud Palmer and pretty escort Susan O'Reilly survey the sprawling site of the upcoming Montreal World's Fair from the gates of EXPO '67.

The Aero Commander Division of Rockwell Standard Corp. which builds the twin-engine business jet at its Bethany, Okla. plant, supplied the executive craft to demonstrate to the officials of Canada and New York the speed, comfort and roominess of today's business jets. The six passengers and two pilots made the quick trip of more than 500 miles in less than an hour in extremely bad weather. Pilot Ted Hurst took off in rain and wind and was soon on top of the cloud layer and cruising in the blue at approximately 24,000 feet.

Conditions were still unpleasant when the group arrived back in New York that night but the plane again demonstrated the ease and practicality of private jet aircraft operating today in all-weather conditions. "Many thanks for a thoroughly delightful trip," Palmer wrote Aero Commander upon his return. "I can't tell you how much I enjoyed the Jet Commander... what a way to travel."

Over enthusiastic participants in radio "talk" programs can be quietly edited without destroying the program's "live" quality thanks to the magnetic tape audio delay loop.
