

VISITORS to the office of the Carolina Times this week were 3rd and 4th grade pupils of the Fayetteville Street School. Accompanying the young people was Mrs. Martha G. Dalton, member of the faculty. Many of the youngsters registered great interest when they observed a linotype and other printing material in action. In the above picture the pupils are being shown a page negative, by Bernard Williams, used in the off-set method of print-

DBC to Participate in MDTA Pilot Program

Washington - Washington, D.C. has been selected to participate in a pilot project under the Manpower Development and Training Act involving direct individual referrals to private business, trade and technical schools being administered by the United Business Schools Association (UBSA) under contract with the U.S. Office of Education, it was announced today by UBSA Executive Director Richard A. Fulton.

The project involves the occupational training and re-training of approximately 480 persons from eight study states: Arkansas, Indiana, Louisiana, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and west Virginia. The training may also be carried out in adjoining states.

This is a cooperative venture between the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (USOE) and the Labor Department. The Labor Department is responsible too determining the jobs needs in the local communities and arranging for the local employment offices to select trainees to prepare for these jobs in the private schools.

UBSA is providing the local employment services with lists of schools eligible to carry out training under the MDTA project. The local employment officer will use these lists to place the trainee in a suitable school.

Sixty trainees will be selected from each of the eight study states.

In addition to schools of the UBSA membership, member institutions in the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools will participate in the MDTA project through an agreement with UBSA.

UBSA, a Washington, D.C.-based association, is acting an agent of the U.S. Office of Education in making facilities available and in paying the trainees' tuition with the $300,000 earmarked by HEW for this purpose.

The program, scheduled to run for a year, will provide direct referrals to private schools from rural and urban areas, reduce the time gap between the selection of the trainee and his entry into training and test the ability of private schools to serve the disadvantaged.

Capt. Eugene W. Davis (USN-Ret.) is administering the project for UBSA from the Washington, D.C. offices at 1101 Seventeenth St., N.W.

Check Your Tax Return Before Mailing it IRS

Greensboro, N.C. - Here's a word of advice from the Internal Revenue Service: After you prepare your 1966 Federal income tax return, it is a good idea to set it aside for a day or so and then give it a thorough review before you mail it.

District Director of Internal Revenue J.E. Wall said that North Carolina taxpayers who heed this advice often find omitted income or deductions, or errors in arithmetic. A review of the return may disclose that the taxpayer failed to provide his name, address, and zip code, omitted his social security number or listed it incorrectly, did not attach all copies of Form W-2, or forgot to sign the return.

This review will be time well spent as it may prevent delays in processing the return and will speed up any refund due, Mr. Wall said.

ASC SOPH NAMED TO CENTRAL MICH. TEAM

Albany, Ga. - Mt. Pleasant, Mich. - Four underclassmen were selected to Central Michigan University's all-opponent basketball team as chosen by the Chip players for the 1966-67 season.

Heading the list were Wilbert Jones, Albany State's (Ga.) 6-7 sophomore forward, and Elvin Ivory, a 6-6 freshman from Southwestern Louisiana. Both were unanimous picks along with Jerry McGreal of Illinois State. Jones, a real solid contender, along with Ivory, for the NAIA all-tournament team, dropped in 24 points against the Chippewas in the opening round 71-70 loss to Central Michigan and grabbed 11 rebounds.

His brother, Melvin Jones, a 6-8 1/2 junior center for Albany State, was picked on the Chips second team.

New Helper For Ironing Day

Ironing will never be fun, but it can be easier. The latest development to lighten the workload is an ironing board cover impregnated with nickel stainless steel. According to the developer, Rockland Industries, Brooklandville, Md., the reversible "Cloth of Steel" cover is scorch-free and odorless, even after two hours under a 450° iron. Because stainless steel reflects heat, delicate fabrics can be pressed at lower temperatures, and less time is required for the ironing job. Iron drag is reduced, thanks to the cover's smooth surface. Available nationwide in houseware stores.

To a stamp collector, May 14, 1918, is a famous date. It marked introduction of the first United States air mail stamp - and the appearance of one of America's most valuable rarities in stamps - the 24-cent airmail invert.

One hundred of these stamps were printed with an inverted center showing the plane flying upside down, explains Ervin J. Felix, stamp editor at Whitman Publishing Company, Racine, Wis.

If you were lucky enough to have a perfect specimen of this stamp today, it would be worth around $30,000 at auction price.

All 100 were originally purchased by W. T. Robey, a Washington, D.C. collector, continues Felix, whose firm manufactures stamp albums and other philatelic supplies.

In his own account of the event, Robey says he was alert to the possibility of a printing error, and happened to be in the right Washington post office at the right time. When he asked for the new stamps on May 14, the day of issue, the clerk reached under his counter - and pulled out a sheet of inverts!

No others were sold. The Government reportedly destroyed three additional inverted sheets still at the Bureau of Engraving, once word got out. All first-day sheets were called back, and safeguards were taken against repetition of the error.

"The 24-cent airmail invert ranks as the classic U.S. postal error," comments Felix, "and while the average collector will never own a rarity of this value, the possibility sparks interest in stamp collecting."
