Supreme Court Reverses Eviction of Mother

School Officials Act as Judge And Defendant

Non-academic employees of Duke University plan to continue picketing at the administration building this week in protest of the administration's rejection of a demand for impartial arbitration of labor disputes.

The picketing began last Thursday, and will continue through this week, from noon to 3 p.m. each day.

According to Oliver Harvey, retiring president of Duke Employees' Local 77. "The present grievance procedure does not allow for impartiality in settling disputes. The administration officials act as both defendant and judge. When employees have grievances, for example when they feel that their work loads are too heavy, it is the administration who decides whether these grievances are valid."

Although the movement is being led by Local 77, Mr. Harvey said, the purpose is to secure an impartial arbitrator in final stages of grievances brought by any non-academic employee, not just by union members.

A group of students and faculty members at Duke, the Student-Faculty Friends of Local 77, have been supporting the employee movement. Mr. Harvey said. He added that he expects a large number of students and faculty to join the picket line this week.

According to Mr. Harvey, a specific case highlighting the need for impartial arbitration is that of Mrs. Iola Woods, a maid in a Duke dormitory. As a result of an "efficiency" study conducted by an outside firm, the Alexander-Proudfoot Co. Mrs. Woods' work load this year was increased by what he feels is an "unreasonable" amount. After a grievance hearing, administration officials decided that her work load was comparable to that of ten other maids under the same supervisor, and that the other women were able to complete the work. However, the administration refused Mrs. Woods and her representative access to any evidence which would show that the other maids' work loads were as heavy and that they were completing them.

Part of Mrs. Woods' schedule calls for performing the following tasks, in one hour and twenty minutes: cleaning 12 dormitory rooms, emptying

Judge William Hastie Delivers Address at Rochester University

ROCHESTER, N. Y. — "Strife and discord engendered by racism... will continue to disfigure our society and to embarrass our efforts to solve other problems until we deal effectively with bitter minority by discontent and sense of frustration," Judge William H. Hastie of the U.S. Court of Appeals said last night (Thursday, April 13) at the University of Rochester. Judge Hastie spoke at the sixth of the University's Frederick Douglass Sesquicentennial Lectures commemorating the 150th anniversary of the birth of Frederick Douglass.

Speaking on "The Negro Militant," Hastie said it is "simply wishful thinking to yearn for any considerable period of calm in which to work out means for enabling the Negro fully to enjoy the benefits and opportunities and the acceptance which the majority of our citizenry enjoy as normal incidents of their American heritage."

Decrying a "middle of the road" approach to racial problems, he said that "there will be no protracted disengagement to permit the gradualist to accomplish constructive changes in a leisurely way, in an unagitated environment, free from pressure."

The United States Supreme Court, Monday April 17, reversed North Carolina Courts that had upheld the eviction of a Negro mother of three from a housing project of Durham.

The Court, however, sidestepped a chance to rule broadly on the constitutional rights of tenants in Federally assisted housing projects.

Mrs. Joyce Thorpe of 38-G Ridgeway Avenue, McDougald Terrace, had been ordered out of her apartment by Housing Authority officials, August 12, 1965. Mrs. Thorpe remained in her apartment under stays of execution preventing her eviction when ordered by the Justice of the Peace Court, The Durham County Superior Court and the North Carolina Supreme Court.

M.C. Burt, Jr., one of Mrs. Thorpe's attorneys, reacting to the decision, said that he was "pleased that the court had ordered the eviction reversed", but that he had "hoped the Court would say, further, that Mrs. Thorpe and other recipients of government benefits have a right to those benefits which are due certain procedural

Mrs. J. A. Carter Holds To Top Place In Subscription Race

The close of the first period of the Carolina Times Big Subscription Contest, Monday, Monday, noon, April 17, saw Mrs. J. A. Carter still holding to the first place.

Final tabulation of subscription ballots and the special Bonus Ballot carried on the front page in last week's issue was not completed until noon Wednesday, due to the large number of ballots that swamped the Contest Manager and his helpers.

Although Mrs. Carter appeared to be in the lead by a fairly safe margin or ahead of Mrs. Oneida McGhee, holder of the second place, rumors continued to prevail that one or more of the trailing contestants will spring a surprise before the Contest ends and ride off in the new Mustang as the winner of the first prize.

Still running close on the heels of Mrs. McGhee, is Mrs. Aline Baldwin of Chapel Hill.

The contest manager would like to advise that half-year subscriptions to the Carolina Times, which are $3.00 instead of $2.51, will not count in the contest. Only subscriptions of one, two, three, four or five years will be allowed, as is plainly indicated on the back of each subscription receipt book sent all contestants.

The 1,000 point Bonus Ballot and the relative standing of Contestants will be found on
