The Supremes Debut at Coconut Grove

HOLLYWOOD — The Supremes — Diana Ross, Mary Wilson and Florence Ballard — the world's number one female vocal group, begin a two-week engagement at the Ambassador Hotel's Coconut Grove on Tuesday, June 13. This will be the first Los Angeles upper club appearance for these three attractive young ladies, each in their early twenties. In the last two years, The Supremes have performed the incredible feat of having ten records reach the number 1 spot on the best-selling charts, an achievement unmatched by any other American group and the first all-girl trio in history to accomplish this.

In addition to their single record sales, the albums of the girls' with the "Motown Sound" are also at the top of the best-selling charts. Meet the Supremes, A Bit of Liverpool, Where Did Our Love Go, The Supremes At The Copa, More Hits By The Supremes, We Remember Sam Cooke, I Hear A Symphony, The Supremes A-Go-Go and The Supremes Sing Holland-Dozier-Holland are all outstanding favorites.

Despite the fact they are so young, the girls are no newcomers to the music world, having joined vocal forces in their hometown of Detroit when each was just 14. After first meeting in church, where they began singing together, the girls won a talent contest during their senior year in high school. They auditioned for Berry Gordy, Jr., president of the Motown Recording Company. Gordy was impressed and told them he would sign them, provided they graduated from high school. They agreed, and in a few short years, The Supremes have skyrocketed to world-wide fame.

At the Grove they will do one show nightly at 10:15 p.m. Monday thru Thursday and two shows, Friday and Saturday, at 9:30 p.m. and midnight. Dick Stabile and his orchestra will play for the show and dancing.

100 for Wilt

HERSHEY, Pa. — Wilt Chamberlain of the Philadelphia Warriors scored 100 points here in a 169-147 victory over the New York Knicks on March 2, 1962.

Big Jack Wasn't Aiming at Record

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. "Records are accidents," U.S. Open champion Jack Nicklaus said Sunday minutes after proving his point.

Nicklaus had just birdied the 18th hole at the Baltusrol Golf Club to win the Open by four strokes over Arnold Palmer with a record score of 275, one shot better than the mark set by Ben Hogan in 1948 at Los Angeles.

"I was playing the 18th hole for a par 5 or at most a bogey 6," Nicklaus said. "If I got a birdie, fine."

"At the 18th tee I had two things on my mind. One was that the only way for Arnie to tie me was if he shot a three and I took a seven. I remembered that Arnie said last year that he was trying to break the record and wound up blowing the whole tournament."

"Also, I remembered that Dick Mayer took a seven on this hole in the 1954 Open and lost out."

"I knew there was water on the left and trees on the right of the fairway. So I hit a one-iron down the right side in the rough. Then I hit a fat eight-iron and finally another one-iron to the green about 23 feet from the pin."

He rolled the putt straight into the cup to erase Hogan's mark.

"I didn't come here to try to break a record; I came here to try to win a golf tournament," Nicklaus said. "Of course, I'm quite happy that I got the record, as well."

Nicklaus, who also won the Open his first year as a pro in 1962, proved that practice makes perfect. After Saturday's play, he spent almost an hour on the practice tee and putting green. He worked on drawing his tee shots from left to right more and on getting his left hand into his putts more.

"I hit the ball as well as I can hit it," he said of his closing 65, one stroke off the Open record for a single round and two shots better than the mark for a Baltusrol Open set in 1954 by Dick Chapman.

"This was my best round in any Open. Was it my best round ever? If it wasn't, it didn't miss by much."

Nicklaus pointed for the Open from the time he missed the cut in the Masters Tournament.

"As soon as I left the Masters the next thing I had in mind was the Open," he said. "I've played more golf so far this year than in any other year since my last as a pro. I've also played more practice rounds than in the last five or six years."

"I was off and running when I birdied the third, fourth and fifth," Nicklaus said. "The bogey at six didn't even bother me, for some reason."

When Nicklaus won the 1962 Open it also was on Father's Day.

Ella and The Duke Jazz Festival H. B.

HOLLYWOOD — The world loves Ella and Duke ... and, they are the stars of Jazz Festival at the Hollywood Bowl which comes to the Hollywood Bowl, Saturday night, July 1st—and starring the whole 1967 national touring company of Norman Granz' Classic.

"Jazz at the Philharmonic" — ELLA FITZGERALD, DUKE ELLINGTON, THE OSCAR PETERSON TRIO, THE JIMMY JONES TRIO and COLEMAN HAWKINS, ZOOT SIMS, CLARK TERRY and BENNY CARTER.

What can you say about Ella Fitzgerald that has not been said before. She's only the greatest interpreter of popular song—and in her career, has completely bridged the gap between jazz, and popular music. Ella's popularity is as strong in Europe and Japan, as it is in the United States. Yearly, she travels over the globe surpassing the classic in performance that has already been set. And through her songs—she has tried to bring a little "brotherhood" and "understanding" between men which is so desperately needed in the world of today. There is no known award for singing excellence, nor humanitarianism that Ella has not received. Ella, in her own time, a modern day legend, The Jazz Festival at the Bowl is proud to have her as the singing in this classic presentation.

The international musician, Duke Ellington, has been—for more than two score years, a composer, arranger, conductor of genius standing. He has been referred to as "one of the great American composers." The Duke—now in his sixties, is more popular than he has ever been in his whole bright career—and Ella is proud to have him, with her at the Bowl—playing "solo" with his esteemed band, and also backing her on certain grooving numbers.

FATHERS OF YEAR — New York Yankees catcher Elton Howard (left) and TV-movie star Dick Van Dyke register jubilation at being teased nationally on Sunday as "Fathers of the Year" in sports and entertainment, respectively. Between them, Ellie and Dick are fathers of seven children. The Howard youngsters are Elston Jr., 11; Cheryl, 8; and Karen, 7. The Van Dyke children are Chris, 15; Barry, 13; Stacy, 10; and Carrie, Beth, 4. Van Dyke's latest starrer is "Divorce American Style."

FAMILIAR POSE, ODD WEAPON—(Los Angeles)—That is no way to handle a rifle—but then again it is a lot more familiar, for the man behind the makeup is none other than Lou Johnson, the versatile outfielder with the Los Angeles Dodgers. Lou, who recently returned to action following an early season ankle break, took some time to play the role of a Swahili in a segment of the TV action series, "Cowboy in Africa" starring Chuck Connors. Clay In Two Exhibitions

DETROIT — Undeclared heavyweight Cassius Clay, dethroned as world's champion by a World Boxing Association WBA decision, Saturday "The American people are too smart to have a new champion put over on them by a group of men who just sit around."

Clay checked into town Monday for an exhibition against two unknowns Thursday night, and said he would work out for the fight in private.

Clay, who lost his world's championship because he refused induction into the Army, goes on trial in U. S. District Court at Houston June 19 on draft evasion charges. He announced the exhibition June 2 and said all proceeds would go to Negro youth charities.

"We'll be able to judge by this exhibition about who the people really think the champion is," Clay said. "The American people are too smart to have a new champion put over on them by a group of men who just sit around—the WBA."

"The American people are just too smart to accept a new champ from a bunch of guys that I've already annihilated. The fans just won't accept that."

Chuck Davey, Michigan's boxing commissioner, said he was ready to issue a license for the six-round exhibition by Clay. "For all intents and purposes they already have it, the license," Davey said. "Everything is in order. It's routine. Unless somebody comes up with something wrong they'll be granted a license."

Davey said he received some telephone calls and letters protesting the exhibition. But, he said, the opposition did not appear heavy and had not come from Gov. George Romney or other state officials.

Clay is slated to fight two three-round exhibitions. One is against Alvin "Blues" Lewis, a 216-pound Detroit heavyweight with a 10-0 record, all against minor opponents. Clay's other opponent is Orville Qualls, of Chicago, who has six wins, one loss and a draw. Qualls lost his last fight April 24 to Aaron Eastling.

"Blues Lewis is a pretty good boy," said Clay. "Both these guys will be out for a reputation. They'll be punching hard. And I'm out to keep looking like who I am—the champ."

Young grid star decides to nix Tennessee offer

ALCOA, Tenn. All-American high school full-back Albert Davis failed to enroll at the University of Tennessee Wednesday during registration for summer classes after previously announcing he would attend summer school.

Davis, who broke the racial barrier at the university when he signed a football grant-in-aid April 14, told Alcoa coach Jack Raby that he had decided not to attend school this summer.

"ALBERT TOLD me he was not going to summer school," said Raby. The Alcoa coach said he did not know whether Davis had changed his future plans.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Albert's mother, declared she did not know what her son's plans are.

DAVIS, A 6-1, 225-pounder, could not be reached immediately for comment.

University of Tennessee athletic officials including athletic director Bob Woodruff and coach Doug Dickey were out of town and unavailable for comment.

Dr. Truman Pouncey, dean of admissions at UT, said Albert is "welcome to enroll at the university."

POUNCEY POINTED out that any Tennessee high school graduate can enroll in UT during the summer quarter without restrictions because the student enrollment is smaller.
