LOVE WILL FIND A WAY—(Washington, D. C.)—The Supreme Court ruled unanimously that a Virginia law banning marriage between Negroes and whites was unconstitutional, thus nullifying a similar statute in 15 other states. The decision came in a case involving Richard P. Loving, a white construction worker and his Negro-Indian wife, Mildred. (shown at news conference here recently). The couple was married in the District of Columbia in 1958 and arrested on their return to their native years. The Lovings decided in Caroline County, Va. They 1963 to return home and fight were given one-year suspended banishment, with the help of sentences on condition that they the American Civil Liberties stay out of the state for 25 Union.
