

GUEST OF LINKLETTER — How did Godfrey Cambridge get started in showbiz? Believe it or not Godfrey was a 'professional laugher' — he was paid $10.00 a show to sit in an audience and laugh his sides out. "That can be the toughest job in the world," he told Art Linkletter, "being a comic of sorts—at least having a natural sense of humor, to laugh at material that wasn't funny is tough... really tough." Now the hottest comic on the air, Cambridge tells Art Linkletter how his career grew from those early days in Philadelphia, when he guests with Linkletter on the "House Party" show, Friday, June 30, on CBS-TV and radio in color.

The peony is one of the most popular and, some think, beautiful perennial plants. There are two types: herbaceous and tree. Since the herbaceous is the most commonly grown, we will confine our suggestions to this type. Another reason for discussing the peony at this time is because we have been told by friends that "my peonies are not doing too well." Perhaps we should point out in the beginning that peonies are vigorous growing, leafy plants that require a good deal of room for proper growth. For this reason, they are not well adapted to a mixed border where the lower growing bedding plants are commonly used. The soil should be rich and deep, the heavier types being best adapted for vigorous growth and production of large flowers. If you have a very sandy soil, you might try mixing in clay and well decomposed compost. A liberal quantity of either dehydrated sheep or cow manure is desirable to be mixed with the soil at planting time, regardless of your soil type. Peonies do not thrive in deep shade because they cannot compete for light, moisture and nutrients so necessary for maximum performance. I saw some plants recently with too much competition from shade trees. They were doing the best they could under prevailing conditions but were spindly, with weak stems and small flowers. The better time to plant the roots is about the first of September in the mountains and her in the lower Piedmont to the latter part of October in the lower Piedmont and Coastal Plain. Dig a hole more than adequate to accommodate the root clumps. Carefully plant the clumps, working soil between the lateral roots with your fingers. Be sure that the buds, or "eyes," are placed two inches below the soil level. Planting the roots too deep is a common cause of failure. The most common method of propagation is by root division. Any piece of root with a bud attached will produce a new plant. If you want large flowers, remove the side buds when they appear. This procedure will give more strength to the terminal bud.

MRS. MERCEDES B. THOMPSON IS WHITTED TEACHER OF THE YEAR

Mrs. Mercedes B. Thompson was selected "Teacher of the Year" from the eighth grade section at J. A. Whitted School for 1967. The award is given by the student council. A teacher is selected through compliments of the students throughout the school, who by choice, compliment all teachers on a particular day, with some small token of appreciation, especially fruit. The teacher receiving the largest total of such compliments is awarded the honor "The best liked teacher" for participation and outstanding performance in school work." Mrs. Thompson's homeroom class (8-6) further honored her with a surprise after school party, June 6, as a token of their love and appreciation for her guidance this year.

Scents-ible Tips for The Bride

There's a bit of work to choosing just the right bridal gown or the best hairdo to go with it, but none at all to creating the perfect atmosphere for your wedding day. You do it with fragrance, the most subtle cosmetic of all, because it's unseen, but never unfelt. Get the drift?

For the most fragrant finale, begin with a long, luxurious, scented bath. It will wrap you in an aura of fragrance, and also do wonders in relaxing you for the excitement ahead. While you loll in the tub, add perfumed bath oil and scented soap to the water. For post-bath pleasure, there's nothing more feminine than dusting powder, skin lotion and perfume. A light floral scent is best, to send a bride down the aisle in a cloud of fragrant freshness.

But before you take that walk, be sure that your wedding attendants are in fragrance harmony with you. No bride wants to be upstaged by an overpowering perfume on someone else in the procession. One way to coordinate scents would be to present each bridesmaid with a gift flacon of delicate perfume as a thank-you memento for serving in the bridal party.

When the wedding is over and your groom goes for the suitcases waiting in the hall, don't let him forget your traincase packed with cosmetic and fragrance accessories. Nowadays, practically every form of fragrance comes in unbreakable, travel-safe containers. There's spray bath powder, deodorant, cologne, even perfumed hair spray, all in matching essence. For example, such a complete fragrance trousseau is offered by Dana in the fresh Ambush scent. It's a light, versatile fragrance, ideal for daytime and date-time. And a purse spray flacon even comes in the same essence. It's just the thing for on-the-spot renewal of fragrance during a day of sightseeing or an evening of dancing.

Now that you're ready to climb aboard that honeymoon express, remember to keep your traincase near you in transit. So much the easier to get to your beauty aids for instant freshening up before arriving at your honeymoon destination.

Femininity-unlimited: A complete fragrance trousseau, in unbreakable spray containers that pack and travel neatly with the bride on her honeymoon.

DAD—A GOOD SPORT

Today's American male usually marries at the age of 23. He's often a father in his late twenties and can often become a grandfather at the ripe, old age of 40!

Because they're young enough, most fathers play an active part in the family's recreation. Dad's kept busy teaching Junior the difference between a putt and a drive, a punt and a punt—as well as taking the family on sports outings.

With a tradition of dressing the American male for more than 50 years, Hanes Knitwear finds that today's fathers are spending more than half their active time in comfortable sportswear. Which goes to prove that Dad's a well-dressed man in motion.

Did the baby's book splash in the bathtub? No matter — if it's made of a special paper. He can spill cereal on it, chew it, or try to tear a page. He and the book are protected. Three new picture books for babies to be found at variety stores — the titles are Baby's Toys, Quack Quack and This Little Pig — are made of a new substance. The paper is actually a thin plastic that took years of experimentation, and today is being used by Whitman Publishing Company of Racine, Wisconsin, nation's leading producers of children's books. "Plus being perfect for infants' or toddlers' picture books, it proves practical for covers of classics and fiction books as well," according to Whitman's art director June Behling. The plastic paper is long-wearing, lint free, holds color with fidelity and resists stain. Safety and convenience factors all count when a baby looks at his first picture books. Non-toxic inks are used, and the pages are not stapled but sewn together. The plastic paper, out of the laboratories of Union Carbide, went through long graphic arts testing before being adopted. It was tried with as many as 50 different coatings and 300 kinds of ink. A printing material so versatile is bound to have other uses. Documents for tropical climates may be printed on it. Army tests have shown that maps printed in the new manner can be buried in swamp-land for a week, can be retrieved and washed off, and still be as good as new. It takes more than an army of experimenters to perfect a new idea. Today you can buy a book to take a toddler's tough treatment. Tomorrow the plastic may be used in dozens more ways — a new page in printing history.

Todday's smart American homemaker will tell you there is nothing "square" about cubes.

The simplicity and classic design of cubes, makes them comfortably compatible with both modern and traditional furnishings. And just to show you that both our homemaker and the cubes have the right angle—cubes have more uses than could have been dreamed up by Ben Franklin himself.

Manufacturers have pointed up their adaptability with a variety of built-in features, according to the Southern Furniture Manufacturers Association. Drawers, doors, and compartments can be juggled about to provide for almost any storage problem.

One manufacturer has created a mobile chest with a removable compartment fitted with vertical slats for storing records or magazines. The rack can be removed to make room for bulkier items. On casters, the chest can be moved about to act as a serving piece or be convenient to a guest.

Another version is a removable clear plastic cube on a wood base that can be used for displaying flowers, art objects, or a particularly prized trophy. Others can be used as end or coffee tables.

The Classic Compatible Cube

A game of chess or checkers could run on for days without having to disturb the playing pieces. Just shove the cube aside until time to take up the game again. One upholstered vinyl model can be used as extra seating or as a snack table.

Cubes come in finishes and shades to go with any style of furniture. There's a leathery look with vinyls, and the metallic look with a glass top supported by a bronze open square frame. Another design comes in pecan veneer with straight parquet crossbanding. They can be completely without ornamentation, or with the simplest of geometric design on door or drawer fronts.

For a brilliant splash of color try grouping three or four cubes in glowing enamel colors—mandarin red, mustard yellow and tangelo—topped with a practical simulated slate. Another style is done in bright polished chrome with a mirror top.

For the sheer beauty of a solid cube of wood, try using them in walnut, oak or pecan finishes with tops of protective plastic laminate. Geometry in design has always been popular, but the many uses the cube fills make it an all-time favorite.

CAREFUL DRIVING PRACTICES

One of the prime rules of safe driving practices is to keep your car in top mechanical condition. Your safety depends on the proper functioning of the vehicle you drive.

If you are sure your car is in ship-shape condition, don't be caught with a "loose nut" behind the wheel. There are many worthwhile driving tips that can be used to keep your car under control at all times.

Although many of these items are simple and basic ideas, they might have escaped from your mind as being important driving tips. A quick review of this list may save the lives of you and your loved ones. Read each item carefully and see if you could improve your driving techniques:

Never drink and drive, give proper and adequate signals, obey safety signs, drive within safe speeds, be on the alert for pedestrians, keep a safe distance behind the car in front, slow down on curves, use caution when passing other cars.

Overconfidence can be a killer. Be cautious and live!
