Wilkins Urges Jobs and Vote in Mo. Speech

CHARLESTON, MO. — In a stirring address to more than 1200 persons gathered in Lincoln School, Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, officially launched the five week Missouri Project which the Association is conducting in the "Boot Heel" area of Missouri. He stressed the facts that the purposes of the project are primarily to train local leadership and to emphasize the importance of voter registration. Speaking of the latter, he said that the power of the vote "is an effective and explosive weapon. We Negroes in our campaign should increase our registration to vote for those who are against us."

He added: "I think the events in Detroit and Newark have made us realize the skill and effectiveness of local people when they are able to establish a dialogue with local leaders. When Negroes start throwing bricks, they should them at people who refuse to register." He reminded his audience that the NAACP is the oldest continuing civil rights organization for Negroes in the United States. He said that although the States of Missouri has received $71 million in Federal funds, very little has come to the 400,000 Negroes in the state. "If money doesn't start to come to the Negroes, we'll take the problem back to Washington and insist that we get some of it."

By working to get ourselves better jobs... by chopping off a little of their economic toes, we can make whites jump faster, but DON'T RIOT! The riots are not in the interests of the Negroes. When you flirt with riots, you flirt with death." Miss Ina Boon, executive secretary of the St. Louis Branch, presided over the Kickoff Rally, which opened with an invocation by the Rev. William Chapman of Kennett, Mo. Greetings were extended by T. P. Fenton, Mayor of Charleston, and Marshall Curran, president of the Charleston NAACP Branch.

got to be with us in this fight, or else you're against us," she said.

LUCAS
