

CLOTHING CHILDREN IN NEED

In Asia, as in other poverty-stricken areas of the world, millions of destitute children like this tiny Vietnamese maid in her mother's arms and the little refugee lad in Macao are in desperate need of clothing.

If you have garments that need minor repair jobs, are simply out-of-style, or that your own youngsters have outgrown—don't throw them away, for they can mean hope, happiness, and perhaps even survival, to these children. A young girl and her little brother in India (left) or the two Latin American children (below) are just four of many to whom your used garments will be of inestimable value.

Clothing the children of the world can be an excellent way to observe the true spirit of Thanksgiving—by putting the accent on giving!

You can help alleviate their plight by taking a bundle of your used but serviceable garments, bedding and shoes to the Catholic church nearest you during the 19th Annual Catholic Bishops' Thanksgiving Clothing Campaign. Items will be shipped abroad and distributed by Catholic Relief Services, the overseas aid agency of American Catholics, to the poor of 80 countries without regard to race or creed.

Jas. Alton Carrington Receives Eagle Award at White Rock

Coast Guard Acad. Wants More Negroes

WASHINGTON — A nationwide search by Coast Guard recruiters revealed this week that it is hard to attract Negroes, especially for cadets and officers training.

On January 20, 1961, the late president, John F. Kennedy, noted that there were no Negroes representing the Coast Guard Academy's cadet corps in his inaugural parade. He made his observation known to academy officials, who launched a recruiting drive at Negro schools and colleges throughout the country.

To-date, five of the academy's 700-plus cadets are Negroes. Nineteen of the Coast Guards 1,182 warrant officers and 674 of its 30,000 enlisted men are Negroes.

"We've made a greater effort to beat the bushes to get them to apply to the academy," a spokesman said, "but when they have got the know-how and ability to make the grade, they choose other more lucrative fields."

Unlike the other military service academies, whose cadets are appointed by congressman, the Coast Guard Academy requires standard college board entrance examinations and a tough physical test.

James Alton Carrington was the recipient of the Eagle Scout Award, the highest award in Scouting, at White Rock Baptist Church, Sunday, September 10, at the 11:00 o'clock service.

Young Carrington who is a member of Explorer Post 55 is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Carrington of 607 Cecil Street. J. W. Carrington, the father is Explorer Advisor of Post 55 of White Rock Baptist Church and also an Eagle Scout, being the first Negro to receive the Award in the Council, has also received the Silver Beaver Award.

Young Carrington who is a member of the Mt. Gilead Baptist Church has followed closely in his father's footsteps and is connected with the Scouting program at his father's church. Starting as a cub scout he has continued through the ranks to become an Eagle Scout. He has done much camping and has attended many scouting expeditions and was a member of the team from the Oconeechee Council who attended the 6th National Boy Scout Jamboree at Valley Forge, Penna. in 1964. He is now a student at Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.

Upon receiving the award from his mother young Carrington in turn, presented his mother with a Silver Necklace bearing the emblem of an Eagle Scout. Officiating was H. E. Tatum, chairman of the Advancement Committee. The presentation was made by W. A. Clement, Vice President of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company and ex-president of the Cheyenne Leaf District. He himself is the holder of the Silver Beaver Award and the father of three sons all of whom are Eagle Scouts. H. W. Gillis is Scout Executive.

Former Congressman Fights Hunger in Latin America

Leonard G. Wolf, pictured visiting a nutrition class in one of the barridos surrounding Lima, Peru, is no stranger to the heartaches of malnutrition—especially in Latin America where five out of every ten children do not live to reach the age of six, 80% directly as a result of malnutrition.

The personable former Iowa congressman has lived with the subject during 42 years as a farmer, proprietor of a feed and farm supply business and, following service in Congress, in his work as Food for Peace director in Brazil and now as Coordinator of the program for the Agency for International Development to combat malnutrition in Latin America.

Wolf, a strong advocate for using American agricultural technology and abundance to help solve the problem of world hunger, is currently in Lima, laying the groundwork for the Fifth Conference of the Americas on Malnutrition scheduled for late September, which he will direct.

Government officials, businessmen, manufacturers, educators, and leaders in voluntary service activities from eighteen member countries of the Alliance for Progress will be represented at the Lima gathering. "The main purpose of the meeting," Wolf said, "is to draw a series of flexible, national blueprints to combat malnutrition which can then be applied in all the Americas."

"Knowledge, when properly used, is our principal weapon in the War on Hunger," he concluded. "Hopefully, this conference will produce the strategy and the commitment to action by national leadership to finally win this Battle in Latin America."

LEARNING SKILLS

Knowing how to sew may not seem much of an achievement to you, but to these two Latin American youngsters, it can mean the first clothes of their young lives that are in good repair—and perhaps later, even a means to a livelihood.

Sewing classes, conducted by Catholic Relief Services, teach people how clothes are made by taking used garments apart and re-making them.

Materials for the sewing classes are the serviceable used clothes, bedding and blankets given annually during November by Americans to the Catholic Bishops' Thanksgiving Clothing Campaign. Your donation, left again this year at the nearest Catholic church, may be the stitch in time that will provide a destitute person with the means of becoming self-sufficient.

GREAT HEART OF CHARITY

Through the ages, the heart has symbolized life, love and generosity: "Have a heart," "kind-hearted," "heartfelt."

The world's biggest heart? It may belong to the American people who give several billion dollars a year to charity. Last year over 20 million pounds of used clothes, bedding, blankets and shoes were donated during the Catholic Bishops' Thanksgiving Clothing Campaign and distributed to the overseas needy.

Giving a destitute person a new lease on life can be a heartening experience, and it is as easy as leaving your serviceable used clothes at the nearest Catholic church during the Thanksgiving season.
