President Rudolph Jones Resigns Presidency Of FSTC

Health Given As Reason for Quitting Post

FAYETTEVILLE—The trustees of Fayetteville State College revealed today that the resignation of President Rudolph Jones, submitted at a regular meeting on January 30th, has reluctantly been accepted.

A committee of three has been appointed to seek a successor to Dr. Jones. He is scheduled to leave the FSC post on July 31, 1969.

In stepping down from the $22,000 post Dr. Jones said he considered this action appropriate because of his "health and for other personal reasons."

Now serving his 13th year as head of the institution, Jones has seen significant improvements during his tenure of office. The curriculum has been expanded. The number of students and teachers has doubled. Faculty salaries have more than doubled. Many new staff members have been added. Expansion of the physical plant has been exceptional. Physical facilities that have been improved include the construction of seven new buildings, extensive roadways, walkways, parking areas, and campus lighting. They also include renovation of three buildings, the construction of four tennis courts and a track on the athletic field. The college has purchased over 60 acres of land, across the railroad from the present campus. On this tract

Phantom Idea Abandoned After 1-Hour

A brand new university designed to give a practical, black oriented education was opened and closed here this week.

Malcolm X Liberation University began operations Monday but closed within an hour. Orientation was started Monday and classes were scheduled to get into high gear next week.

The school, created by Afro-American students from Duke University, was located in the downtown offices of the Foundation for Community Development (FCD).

The basic purpose of the school, as explained by Mike McBride, president of the Duke Afro-American Society, was to offer a "pragmatic" education for black persons. The school was especially geared to courses providing tools for use in working on problems of the black community.

"Malcolm X University was designed to provide something for black persons which Duke University either could not or would not," McBride said. "That something is a curriculum which is meaningful and relevant to serious black students."

McBride, a sophomore majoring in physics, pointed to Malcolm X University's five planned "core courses" as an example of meaningful, relevant curriculum material. The required courses were: Afro-American History; A Study of the Black Community; The Psychology of Racism; The Role of the Black Church in the Black Revolution; and Afro-American Political Science. Many other courses were planned.

NCM Pres. Delivers Address At Chain's 30th Annual Dinner Meet

Speaking to 250 people at the 30th annual dinner meeting of the Durham Business and Professional Chain held at the N. C. College Cafeteria Tuesday evening, Joseph W. Goodloe, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, said, "The name of the game in the marketplace is profit. And, it is the same for black as well as white businessmen."

"It is my personal feeling," he continued, "that the problem of accepting the reality of this is not with the buying public as much as it is with the managements of black enterprises. I know we, at North Carolina Mutual, like so many other Negro businessmen, were not at first convinced that, in most cases, the economic factors would really outweigh racial considerations. We now know, in a free society, that if

Maynard Jackson Enters Race For Vice Mayor of Atlanta, Ga.

By Raleigh Bryans

Maynard Jackson, the 31-year-old Negro lawyer who ran against U. S. Sen. Herman Talmadge last fall, formally announced Friday he is a candidate for vice mayor of Atlanta.

Jackson is the first to declare for the office of vice mayor, which is held now by Sam Massell, an unannounced though obvious candidate for mayor.

In his announcement, Jackson said his own candidacy is based on an assumption that Massell will not reoffer for vice mayor but "is going to offer for another office."

Though a member of a distinguished Atlanta family, Jackson was all but unknown when he emerged last year as a candidate against Talmadge, a political force of long standing.

On a statewide basis, Jackson lost to Talmadge by a 3 to 1 margin, but in Atlanta proper, the youthful lawyer edged out the incumbent senator. He noted this Friday.

"When the city of Atlanta on last Sept. 11 voted for me in such great numbers that I received 9,000 votes more than my opponent, they recorded in black and white their confidence in me," he said.

"I have decided therefore to offer my candidacy for vice mayor of the City of Atlanta. The people of Atlanta will speak again this year and I consider this office a challenge and an honor which I would be proud

Opposition to Unfair Plans Is Expressed

RALEIGH — In a statement issued this week through its executive secretary, E. B. Palmer, the Board of Directors of the N. C. Teachers Association in a regular session held March 15 issued the following statement of its action and stand on the matter of a merger with the N. C. Education Association:

Authorized the Executive Secretary to again make known its long established position on merger. "The North Carolina Teachers Association has requested and sought a fair and equitable merger with the North Carolina Education Association for more than five years. This has been and still is the desire of the NCTA. Negotiations towards this end are at an impasse not because of 'Black Militancy,' 'Black Power,' nor desires for 'Black Separatism,' but due to the lack of men of 'Good Faith' to negotiate terms of merger based on the equality of mankind. If 'Black Militancy' on the part of NCTA leadership and membership means the failure to accept the doing out of token, general, limited terms of merger, then we own up to 'Black Militancy.' If 'Black Power' means, the failure of NCTA leadership and membership to stand up for what is best in the interest of all educators and education in North Carolina, then we own up to 'Black Power.' If 'Black Separatism' means that the NCTA leadership and membership will not be 'swallowed up' nor stand by and see its members being unethically, unprofessionally and immorally abused, eliminated from the profession and derided in rank will stay united and not merge unless terms of guaran-
