Negro Opera Star Will Perform Artists Series Recital at Duke U.

Metropolitan Opera Company mezzo-soprano Shirley Verrett is a striking figure of a woman, whether in the brilliant gypsy garb of a Bizet's "Carman," or in the formal evening gown of the recital hall.

She also has a striking voice, which has been acclaimed by critics of England, Italy, Germany and the Soviet Union.

On April 10, Miss Verrett will bring her artistry to Duke University's Page Auditorium in an 8:15 p.m. song recital. The program is a feature of the University's 1969 Artist's Series.

Within the past five years the New Orleans born diva has established herself as a singing star of the first magnitude.

Last year, before her Metropolitan Opera debut, Miss Verrett has sung Carmen in Florence, Italy, and other cities; had impressed the critics in London with three major mezzo-soprano roles in Covent Garden.

When she sang the role of Queen Elizabeth in the American Opera Society's production of "Maria Stuarda" the New York Times reported, "Her voice has blossomed into a big, brilliant instrument," Miss Verrett "sang the role majestically," declared the New Yorker critic.

For the Negro mezzo, her triumphs in Spoleto, Italy, with the Bolshoi Opera in Moscow, to the Lausanne (Switzerland) Festival, in New York's Lewisohn Stadium, and at Montreal's Place des Arts, together with recitals and opera appearances across the United States, have served to build her reputation to a high place among all today's artists.

At Duke, Miss Verrett will be heard in arias from Handel's "Alcina," a group of four Brahms lieder with texts from scriptures in I Corinthians and Ecclesiastes; and the aria "Amour, viens rendre a mon ame," from Gluck's opera "Orpheus and Euridice."

Think you can't entertain elegantly on short notice? Yes, you can.

Keep one shelf and one corner of your cupboard stocked with your favorite canned foods. Then when unexpected guests drop in—these quick tricks will spell out your social success story.

1. Crabmeat Casserole Supreme (Serves 4)
2-8 oz. cans crabmeat
1 can condensed cream of tomato soup
1 can condensed split pea soup
1 jigger Harvey's Bristol Cream
¼ tsp. curry powder
¼ tsp. cayenne pepper
1 cup cream (light or heavy as desired)

Remove membrane from crabmeat. Mix all ingredients together and heat in a shallow casserole in a medium oven (about 350 degrees) for 20 to 25 minutes. Serve with noodles, a green salad and canned pineapple soaked in rum. Result: A taste triumph to please your most finicky friends.

Be prepared and you'll find you can stage a spontaneous celebration, on cue, with all the fun left in and the fuss left out.

Students "Mean Business" at John Hancock's Night School

BOSTON—Every Tuesday and Thursday night the home office of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. becomes a school for Boston area residents seeking the equivalent of a high school education or new skills.

The Hancock's Prep Program, which entered its third semester this month, is designed to aid people age 17 and over to qualify for high school equivalency certificates. It also offers vocational training to increase job-getting ability.

Kenneth F. MacIver, John Hancock senior vice president and secretary said, "It is particularly significant that of the 106 men and women enrolled this term, 51 are carry-overs from last year's program. This compares with 25 participants who continued their studies last year."

"I hope the success of our modest educational program will encourage other firms to initiate similar efforts," MacIver said. "This is one area in which we feel business can appreciably improve man's opportunities to learn and progress by providing too proper atmosphere and facilities."

He said that both teaching facilities and courses offered have been increased this year due to the program's popularity. The program now requires 12 teachers and 11 classrooms located in the insurance firm's home office building. Several subjects have been added to the curriculum, bringing the total to 16.

The curriculum was planned by the company's permanent teaching staff in cooperation with Massachusetts Department of Education specialists.

The faculty is drawn from the company's teaching staff and teachers from school systems in Boston's metropolitan area.

Students are recruited by Jobs Clearing House of Boston, a nonprofit job placement service, to attend two evening classes a week for 13 weeks. Each class meets for three hours.

Chartered buses are provided by the Hancock to and from specific points within the city and meals are served in the company cafeteria to students upon arrival. The emphasis has been to make participation in the program as convenient and productive as possible. Among the courses now offered in addition to equivalency subjects are typing, filing, business machines and language arts.

Added to the curriculum this year is a preparatory course for General Education Development tests which can be taken to qualify for the equivalency certificate.

Course participants can earn their certificates either by completing all training requirements through classes offered in the Prep Program, or by passing The G. E. D. test.

Interest Deduction Errors Can Slow Up Refunds

Greensboro, N. C.—Questionable interest deductions slowed down the processing of hundreds of thousands of refund claims last year, J. E. Wall, District Director of Internal Revenue for North Carolina, said today.

In some cases an examination of the interest deduction uncovered an error which meant additional taxes to be paid. In others, the return was accepted as filed, but the refund was delayed by the time required to examine the interest deduction.

Taxpayers planning to claim an interest deduction on their 1968 federal tax return should be sure to read the instructions carefully to avoid errors—and refund delays, Wall advised.

For taxpayers who itemize deductions, the interest paid on a home mortgage, a bank loan or debt may be deducted if the taxpayer is legally responsible for the payment. Interest paid for another person is not deductible, Wall said.

A common case where an interest deduction is disallowed is when a parent makes a mortgage payment for his children. The parent's claim for an interest deduction is disallowed unless the home is in his name.

Quick Way To Prepare Garden Sprays

Instead of the messy job of mixing and measuring chemicals to protect plants from insects and fungus diseases, Gale Gill uses a new pre-mixed and pre-measured water soluble packet of "Pop-In" garden spray. Each packet contains the right amount of chemical powders to make a gallon of effective, economical spray for plants, trees or to control weeds. It's a quick and safe way to prepare garden sprays.
